- "Ernst Herzfeld Papers; Cyanotypes File 16", which was arranged by Ernst Herzfeld, provides 313 photographic prints which relate to field study of various architectural buildings as well as Arabic inscriptions at Baalbek (Lebanon), Hims (Syria) and Damascus (Syria).

- Additional information from Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive reads, "The prints are from three sources: (1) those from glass negatives; (2) those from cut film; and (3) those for which there are no negatives. The Archive contains Herzfeld's glass negatives, numbered from 1 to 3850. Of most of these he had blueprints made which he had arranged in 16 binders by general categories, irrespective of the number on the negative. These formed the nucleus for the preparation of the Photo Files. The 16 binders of blueprints have been replaced by Photo Files, Nos. 1-16. The prints in each File are arranged in the same order as the blueprints; and the number of the negative is enclosed in parentheses. Following a brief identification, is a reference to the place where the print has been published, if that is the case and such publication has been located."

- "Ernst Herzfeld Papers; Cyanotypes File 16" is composed of 313 cyanotype prints (blueprints), made from the following glass plates, "FSA a.6 04.GN.3929; FSA a.6 04.GN.3930; FSA a.6 04.GN.3931; FSA a.6 04.GN.3832; FSA a.6 04.GN.3933; FSA a.6 04.GN.3934; FSA a.6 04.GN.3935; FSA a.6 04.GN.3936; FSA a.6 04.GN.3937; FSA a.6 04.GN.3939; FSA a.6 04.GN.3067; FSA a.6 04.GN.3726; FSA a.6 04.GN.3301; FSA a.6 04.GN.3798; FSA a.6 04.GN.3719; FSA a.6 04.GN.3718; FSA a.6 04.GN.3302; FSA a.6 04.GN.3303; FSA a.6 04.GN.3813; FSA a.6 04.GN.3072; FSA a.6 04.GN.3811; FSA a.6 04.GN.3812; FSA a.6 04.GN.3252; FSA a.6 04.GN.3262; FSA a.6 04.GN.3801; FSA a.6 04.GN.3801a; FSA

Ernst Herzfeld Papers, Series 4: Photographic Files; Syrian Architecture (Cyanotypes File 16)

Local Numbers:

Ernst Herzfeld Papers; Cyanotypes File 16
FSA A.6 04.CY.16

- Arrangement: - Of most of his 3,890 glass negatives, Herzfeld had blueprints made which he arranged in 16 binders irrespective of the number on the negative. In addition to the 16 blueprint binders, he assembled 5 albums including two from the Samarra series labelled "Paläste und Moscheen-I and -II." The remainder of the photographs, from glass negatives and from cut films, sometimes identified by Herzfeld, were printed en masse for study purpose (labelled by Upton as duplicate prints) and which are, for the most part, unpublished. For his own research, Herzfeld also collected prints from many sources. Of those there are no negatives. Finally, in early 1970s, Joseph Upton reorganized the whole Herzfeld collection of photographic prints into 42 photographic files, assembling 14 additional files in excess of the 21 existing files arranged by Herzfeld himself. The eight remaining files, File 35 to File 42, are made of duplicate prints provided by the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago.

- Of most of his 3,890 glass negatives, Herzfeld had blueprints made which he arranged in 16 binders irrespective of the number on the negative. In addition to the 16 blueprint binders, he assembled 5 albums including two from the Samarra series labelled "Paläste und Moscheen-I and -II." The remainder of the photographs, from glass negatives and from cut films, sometimes identified by Herzfeld, were printed en masse for study purpose (labelled by Upton as duplicate prints) and which are, for the most part, unpublished. For his own research, Herzfeld also collected prints from many sources. Of those there are no negatives. Finally, in early 1970s, Joseph Upton reorganized the whole Herzfeld collection of photographic prints into 42 photographic files, assembling 10 additional files in excess of the 24 existing files arranged by Herzfeld himself. The eight remaining files, File 35 to File 42, are made of duplicate prints provided by the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago.

- Title is provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive.

- "Photo File 16, Volume 1", which was assembled by Joseph Upton, provides 156 photographic prints which relate to field study of various architectural buildings, as well as Arabic and Greek inscriptions from Baalbek (Lebanon), Hims (Syria) and Damascus (Syria).

- Additional information from Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive reads, "The prints are from three sources: (1) those from glass negatives; (2) those from cut film; and (3) those for which there are no negatives. The Archive contains Herzfeld's glass negatives, numbered from 1 to 3850. Of most of these he had blueprints made which he had arranged in 16 binders by general categories, irrespective of the number on the negative. These formed the nucleus for the preparation of the Photo Files. The 16 binders of blueprints have been replaced by Photo Files, Nos. 1-16. The prints in each File are arranged in the same order as the blueprints; and the number of the negative is enclosed in parentheses. Following a brief identification, is a reference to the place where the print has been published, if that is the case and such publication has been located."

- "Photo File 16, Volume 1" is composed of 156 photographic prints, made from the following glass plates, "FSA a.6 04.GN.3929; FSA a.6 04.GN.3930; FSA a.6 04.GN.3931; FSA a.6 04.GN.3832; FSA a.6 04.GN.3933; FSA a.6 04.GN.3934; FSA a.6 04.GN.3935; FSA a.6 04.GN.3936; FSA a.6 04.GN.3937; FSA a.6 04.GN.3939; FSA a.6 04.GN.3067; FSA a.6 04.GN.3726; FSA a.6 04.GN.3301; FSA a.6 04.GN.3798; FSA a.6 04.GN.3719; FSA a.6 04.GN.3718; FSA a.6 04.GN.3302; FSA a.6 04.GN.3303; FSA a.6 04.GN.3813; FSA a.6 04.GN.3072; FSA a.6 04.GN.3811; FSA a.6 04.GN.3812; FSA a.6 04.GN.3252; FSA a.6 04.GN.3262; FSA a.6 04.GN.3801; FSA a.6 04.GN.3801a; FSA a.6 04.GN.3343; FSA a.6 04.GN.3335; FSA a.6 04.GN.3802; FSA a.6 04.GN.3310; FSA a.6 04.GN.3253; FSA a.6 04.GN.3255; FSA a.6 04.GN.3254; FSA a.6 04.GN.3260; FSA a.6 04.GN.3308; FSA a.6 04.GN.3307; FSA a.6 04.GN.3797; FSA a.6 04.GN.3722; FSA a.6 04.GN.3724; FSA a.6 04.GN.3723; FSA a.6 04.GN.3815; FSA a.6 04.GN.3725; FSA a.6 04.GN.3309; FSA a.6 04.GN.3070; FSA a.6 04.GN.3073; FSA a.6 04.GN.3071; FSA a.6 04.GN.3077; FSA a.6 04.GN.3069; FSA a.6 04.GN.3796; FSA a.6 04.GN.3796a; FSA a.6 04.GN.3305; FSA a.6 04.GN.3306; FSA a.6 04.GN.3076; FSA a.6 04.GN.3058; FSA a.6 04.GN.3311; FSA a.6 04.GN.3304; FSA a.6 04.GN.3074; FSA a.6 04.GN.3075; FSA a.6 04.GN.3795; FSA a.6 04.GN.3814; FSA a.6 04.GN.3799; FSA a.6 04.GN.3800; FSA a.6 04.GN.3338; FSA a.6 04.GN.3339; FSA a.6 04.GN.3329; FSA a.6 04.GN.3333; FSA a.6 04.GN.3345; FSA a.6 04.GN.3341; FSA a.6 04.GN.3344; FSA a.6 04.GN.3435; FSA a.6 04.GN.3436; FSA a.6 04.GN.3327; FSA a.6 04.GN.3678; FSA a.6 04.GN.3671; FSA a.6 04.GN.3673; FSA a.6 04.GN.3675; FSA a.6 04.GN.3676; FSA a.6 04.GN.3677; FSA a.6 04.GN.3672; FSA a.6 04.GN.3668; FSA a.6 04.GN.3101; FSA a.6 04.GN.3102; FSA a.6 04.GN.3097; FSA a.6 04.GN.3099; FSA a.6 04.GN.3667; FSA a.6

4.16.2: Vol. 2, 1904-1934

60 Photographic prints (Volume one: 2 folders; b&w; 29.2 cm. x 22.8 cm.)

Creator: Herzfeld, Ernst, 1879-1948

FSA A.6 04.PF.16.v2

- Of most of his 3,890 glass negatives, Herzfeld had blueprints made which he arranged in 16 binders irrespective of the number on the negative. In addition to the 16 blueprint binders, he assembled 5 albums including two from the Samarra series labelled "Paläste und Moscheen-I and -II." The remainder of the photographs, from glass negatives and from cut films, sometimes identified by Herzfeld, were printed en masse for study purpose (labelled by Upton as duplicate prints) and which are, for the most part, unpublished. For his own research, Herzfeld also collected prints from many sources. Of those there are no negatives. Finally, in early 1970s, Joseph Upton reorganized the whole Herzfeld collection of photographic prints into 42 photographic files, assembling 10 additional files in excess of the 24 existing files arranged by Herzfeld himself. The eight remaining files, File 35 to File 42, are made of duplicate prints provided by the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago.

- Title is provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive.

- "Photo File 16, Volume 2", which was assembled by Joseph Upton, provides 60 photographic prints which relate to field study of various architectural buildings, as well as Arabic and Greek inscriptions from Damascus (Syria).

- Additional information from Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive reads, "The prints are from three sources: (1) those from glass negatives; (2) those from cut film; and (3) those for which there are no negatives. The Archive contains Herzfeld's glass negatives, numbered from 1 to 3850. Of most of these he had blueprints made which he had arranged in 16 binders by general categories, irrespective of the number on the negative. These formed the nucleus for the preparation of the Photo Files. The 16 binders of blueprints have been replaced by Photo Files, Nos. 1-16. The prints in each File are arranged in the same order as the blueprints; and the number of the negative is enclosed in parentheses. Following a brief identification, is a reference to the place where the print has been published, if that is the case and such publication has been located."

- "Photo File 16, Volume 2" is composed of 60 photographic prints, made from the following glass plates, "FSA a.6 04.GN.2840; FSA a.6 04.GN.2812; FSA a.6 04.GN.2809; FSA a.6 04.GN.3640; FSA a.6 04.GN.3639; FSA a.6 04.GN.2827; FSA a.6 04.GN.3641; FSA a.6 04.GN.2811; FSA a.6 04.GN.2826; FSA a.6 04.GN.2804; FSA a.6 04.GN.2832; FSA a.6 04.GN.2833; FSA a.6 04.GN.2824; FSA a.6 04.GN.3336; FSA a.6 04.GN.2757; FSA a.6 04.GN.2813; FSA a.6 04.GN.2829; FSA a.6 04.GN.2831; FSA a.6 04.GN.2843; FSA a.6 04.GN.2845; FSA a.6 04.GN.2839; FSA a.6 04.GN.2808; FSA a.6 04.GN.2805; FSA a.6 04.GN.3128; FSA a.6 04.GN.3646; FSA a.6 04.GN.3647; FSA a.6 04.GN.3636; FSA a.6 04.GN.2769; FSA a.6 04.GN.3642; FSA a.6 04.GN.3638; FSA a.6 04.GN.3643; FSA a.6 04.GN.3826; FSA a.6 04.GN.3828; FSA a.6 04.GN.3829; FSA a.6 04.GN.3818; FSA a.6 04.GN.3821; FSA a.6 04.GN.2853; FSA a.6 04.GN.3827; FSA a.6 04.GN.3825; FSA a.6 04.GN.2848; FSA a.6 04.GN.3824; FSA a.6 04.GN.3822; FSA a.6 04.GN.3823; FSA a.6 04.GN.2759; FSA a.6 04.GN.2752; FSA a.6 04.GN.3337; FSA a.6 04.GN.2754; FSA a.6 04.GN.2815; FSA a.6 04.GN.2762; FSA a.6 04.GN.3635; FSA a.6 04.GN.3543; FSA a.6 04.GN.3820; FSA a.6 04.GN.3817; FSA a.6 04.GN.3666; FSA a.6 04.GN.3634; FSA a.6 04.GN.3637; FSA a.6 04.GN.3816; FSA a.6 04.GN.3631; FSA a.6 04.GN.3632; FSA a.6 04.GN.3340."

138 Photographic prints (Volume one: 3 folders; b&w; 29.2 cm. x 22.8 cm.)

Creator: Herzfeld, Ernst, 1879-1948

Language: Undetermined.

FSA A.6 04.PF.16.v3

- Of most of his 3,890 glass negatives, Herzfeld had blueprints made which he arranged in 16 binders irrespective of the number on the negative. In addition to the 16 blueprint binders, he assembled 5 albums including two from the Samarra series labelled "Paläste und Moscheen-I and -II." The remainder of the photographs, from glass negatives and from cut films, sometimes identified by Herzfeld, were printed en masse for study purpose (labelled by Upton as duplicate prints) and which are, for the most part, unpublished. For his own research, Herzfeld also collected prints from many sources. Of those there are no negatives. Finally, in early 1970s, Joseph Upton reorganized the whole Herzfeld collection of photographic prints into 42 photographic files, assembling 10 additional files in excess of the 24 existing files arranged by Herzfeld himself. The eight remaining files, File 35 to File 42, are made of duplicate prints provided by the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago.

- Title is provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive.

- "Photo File 16, Volume 2", which was assembled by Joseph Upton, provides 138 photographic prints which relate to field study of various architectural buildings, as well as Arabic inscriptions from Damascus (Syria) and Hims (Syria).

- Additional information from Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive reads, "The prints are from three sources: (1) those from glass negatives; (2) those from cut film; and (3) those for which there are no negatives. The Archive contains Herzfeld's glass negatives, numbered from 1 to 3850. Of most of these he had blueprints made which he had arranged in 16 binders by general categories, irrespective of the number on the negative. These formed the nucleus for the preparation of the Photo Files. The 16 binders of blueprints have been replaced by Photo Files, Nos. 1-16. The prints in each File are arranged in the same order as the blueprints; and the number of the negative is enclosed in parentheses. Following a brief identification, is a reference to the place where the print has been published, if that is the case and such publication has been located."

- "Photo File 16, Volume 3" is composed of 138 photographic prints, mostly from Herzfeld's study collection of photographs, which were added to this file by Joseph Upton. A few are related to the glass plates, "FSA a.6 04.GN.3938; FSA a.6 04.GN.3819."

Subseries 4.19: Photo File 19: Samarra: Wandschmuck, 1911-1923

291 Photographic prints (Volume one: 6 folders; b&w; 29.2 cm. x 22.8 cm.)

Creator: Herzfeld, Ernst, 1879-1948

Scope and Contents: These are prints of illustrations in vol.1. Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, insofar as they were found in the collection. Plate numbers and captions are from the published volume. There are no negatives for these prints in the collection. See Note for File 22.

- "Photo File 19", which was assembled by Joseph Upton, provides 291 photographic prints of illustrations in Herzfeld's 1923 publication, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 1: Der Wandschmuck der Bauten von Samarra und seine Ornamentik".

- Additional information from Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive reads, "[Photo File 19]: Plate numbers and captions are from the published volume. There are no negatives for these prints in the collection. The only identification, written on the backs of the prints which were glued to the Album page, had a first number in red crayon used in the captions as the negative number. In some cases, an additional number is given in blue crayon, possibly indicating a revision of the list or an alternative negative. The encircled number on the margin gives the position in the Album."

- "Photo File 19" is composed of 291 photographic prints, "FSA A.6 04.PF.19.001; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.002; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.003; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.004; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.005; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.006; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.007; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.008; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.009; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.010; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.011; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.012; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.013; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.014; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.015; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.016; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.017; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.018; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.019; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.020; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.021; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.022; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.023; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.024; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.025; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.026; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.027; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.028; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.029; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.030; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.031; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.032; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.033; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.034; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.035; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.036; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.037; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.038; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.039; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.040; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.041; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.042; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.043; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.044; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.045; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.046; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.047; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.048; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.049; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.050; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.051; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.052; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.053; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.054; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.055; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.056; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.057; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.058; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.059; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.060; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.061; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.062; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.063; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.064; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.065; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.066; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.067; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.068; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.069; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.070; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.071; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.072; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.073; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.074; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.075; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.076; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.077; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.078; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.079; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.080; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.081; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.082; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.083; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.084; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.085; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.086; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.087; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.088; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.089; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.090; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.091; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.092; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.093; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.094; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.095; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.096; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.097; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.098; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.099; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.100; FSA A.6 04.PF.19.101; FSA A.6

184 Photographic prints (Volume one: 5 folders; b&w; 29.2 cm. x 22.8 cm.)

Creator: Herzfeld, Ernst, 1879-1948
 Scope and Contents: See Note for File 22.

- "Photo File 20", which was assembled by Joseph Upton, provides 184 photographic prints of illustrations in Friedrich Sarre's 1925 publication, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 2: Die Keramik von Samarra" and Herzfeld's 1948 publication, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 6: Geschichte der Stadt Samarra."

- Additional information from Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive reads, "[Photo File 20]: There are no negatives for these prints in the collection. Prints of illustrations in vol.II, Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, "Die Keramik" von F. Sarre, insofar as found in the Archive. These are supplemented by unpublished photos of ceramics. The inventory numbers were noted on the backs of the prints and refer to the Expedition Inventory of Finds in the Archive (Archive No.S-1). The negative numbers proceeded by an "S", also noted on the backs, refer to a Samarra listing. Plate numbers refer to the printed text. Also include prints of illustrations in vol.VI, Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, "Die Geschichte der Stadt Samarra." Plate numbers are those given in the printed text. Also included are related panoramic views, unpublished."

file folders which are housed in document boxes, and stored on shelves.

- Title is provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Friedrich Sarre's publication, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3: Die Malereien von Samarra."

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1912 and 1913.

- Original publication caption reads, "Djusaq, Harem. Tänzerinnen und Reiterinnen in quadratischen und achteckigem Rahmen." [Herzfeld, Ernst, 1927: "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3; Die Malereien von Samarra. Verlag Dietrich Reimer Ernst Vohsen, Berlin. Pp. 9-13 and Plate I.]

- Original publication caption reads, "Djusaq, Harem. Bild der Tänzerinnen, teilweise ergänzt. Bruchstücke von weiteren Tänzerinnen." [Herzfeld, Ernst, 1927: "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3; Die Malereien von Samarra. Verlag Dietrich Reimer Ernst Vohsen, Berlin. Pp. 9-13 and Plate II.]

- Original publication caption reads, "Djusaq, Harem. Reste von Gegenständen zum Bilde der Tänzerinnen." [Herzfeld, Ernst, 1927: "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3; Die Malereien von Samarra. Verlag Dietrich Reimer Ernst Vohsen, Berlin. Pp. 9-13 and Plate III.]

- Additional information from Archives staff reads, "Samarra was founded by the Abbasid Caliph al-Mu'tasim (r. 833-842) in 836 AD to serve as his imperial capital. [...] The construction of the many mosques and palaces at Samarra fostered an early flowering of architectural decoration. What mainly survives today are wall revetments in carved stucco and wall paintings on fine gypsum surfaces. Earlier Iranian (Sassanian) decorative styles influenced much of the carved stucco panels found at Samarra. The decoration was primarily based on vegetal forms but later developed into more abstract motifs. The wall paintings illustrate a wide range of subjects such as geometric patterns and courtly scenes with figurative representations of listening and playing music, banqueting and dancing. Depictions of animals, especially camels and birds also feature on fragments recovered from the site. [...] Construction halted at Samarra in about 880 AD and later was abandoned by the Caliph and his court in 892." [Lucia Burgio, Robin J.H. Clark, Mariam Rosser-Owen, "Raman analysis of ninth-century Iraqi stuccoes from Samarra", Journal of Archaeological Science 34 (2007) 756-762.]

- Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative."

Prints are organized in sequential number following publication series, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra." They are arranged in photo file folders which are housed in document boxes, and stored on shelves.

- Title is provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Friedrich Sarre's publication, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3: Die Malereien von Samarra."

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1912 and 1913.

- Original publication caption reads, "Djawsaq, Harem. Stehende männliche Gewandfiguren in Arkaden." [Herzfeld, Ernst, 1927: "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3; Die Malereien von Samarra. Verlag Dietrich Reimer Ernst Vohsen, Berlin. Pp. 18-21 and Plate VII, top.]

- Additional information from Archives staff reads, "Samarra was founded by the Abbasid Caliph al-Mu'tasim (r. 833-842) in 836 AD to serve as his imperial capital. [...] The construction of the many mosques and palaces at Samarra fostered an early flowering of architectural decoration. What mainly survives today are wall revetments in carved stucco and wall paintings on fine gypsum surfaces. Earlier Iranian (Sassanian) decorative styles influenced much of the carved stucco panels found at Samarra. The decoration was primarily based on vegetal forms but later developed into more abstract motifs. The wall paintings illustrate a wide range of subjects such as geometric patterns and courtly scenes with figurative representations of listening and playing music, banqueting and dancing. Depictions of animals, especially camels and birds also feature on fragments recovered from the site. [...] Construction halted at Samarra in about 880 AD and later was abandoned by the Caliph and his court in 892." [Lucia Burgio, Robin J.H. Clark, Mariam Rosser-Owen, "Raman analysis of ninth-century Iraqi stuccoes from Samarra", Journal of Archaeological Science 34 (2007) 756-762.]

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "Samarra was founded by the Abbasid Caliph al-Mu'tasim (r. 833-842) in 836 AD to serve as his imperial capital. [...] The construction of the many mosques and palaces at Samarra fostered an early flowering of architectural decoration. What mainly survives today are wall revetments in carved stucco and wall paintings on fine gypsum surfaces. Earlier Iranian (Sassanian) decorative styles influenced much of the carved stucco panels found at Samarra. The decoration was primarily based on vegetal forms but later developed into more abstract motifs. The wall paintings illustrate a wide range of subjects such as geometric patterns and courtly scenes with figurative representations of listening and playing music, banqueting and dancing. Depictions of animals, especially camels and birds also feature on fragments recovered from the site. [...] Construction halted at Samarra in about 880 AD and later was abandoned by the Caliph and his court in 892." [Lucia Burgio, Robin J.H. - Title is provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Friedrich Sarre's publication, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3: Die Malereien von Samarra."

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1912 and 1913.

Original publication caption reads, "Djawsaq, Harem. Füllhornranken mit jagdtieren und menschlichen gestalten. Stück von einer hockenden Frau mit Kissen." [Herzfeld, Ernst, 1927: "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3; Die Malereien von Samarra. Verlag Dietrich Reimer Ernst Vohsen, Berlin. Pp. 22-29, and Plate XVI, left.]

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "Samarra was founded by the Abbasid Caliph al-Mu'tasim (r. 833-842) in 836 AD to serve as his imperial capital. [...] The construction of the many mosques and palaces at Samarra fostered an early flowering of architectural decoration. What mainly survives today are wall revetments in carved stucco and wall paintings on fine gypsum surfaces. Earlier Iranian (Sassanian) decorative styles influenced much of the carved stucco panels found at Samarra. The decoration was primarily based on vegetal forms but later developed into more abstract motifs. The wall paintings illustrate a wide range of subjects such as geometric patterns and courtly scenes with figurative representations of listening and playing music, banqueting and dancing. Depictions of animals, especially camels and birds also feature on fragments recovered from the site. [...] Construction halted at Samarra in about 880 AD and later was abandoned by the Caliph and his court in 892." [Lucia Burgio, Robin J.H. Clark, Mariam Rosser-Owen, "Raman analysis of ninth-century Iraqi stuccoes from Samarra", Journal of Archaeological Science 34 (2007) 756-762.]

[...] The construction of the many mosques and palaces at Samarra fostered an early flowering of architectural decoration. What mainly survives today are wall revetments in carved stucco and wall paintings on fine gypsum surfaces. Earlier Iranian (Sassanian) decorative styles influenced much of the carved stucco panels found at Samarra. The decoration was primarily based on vegetal forms but later developed into more abstract motifs. The wall paintings illustrate a wide range of subjects such as geometric patterns and courtly scenes with figurative representations of listening and playing music, banqueting and dancing. Depictions of animals, especially camels and birds also feature on fragments recovered from the site. [...] Construction halted at Samarra in about 880 AD and later was abandoned by the Caliph and his court in 892." [Lucia Burgio, Robin J.H. Clark, Mariam Rosser-Owen, "Raman analysis of ninth-century Iraqi stuccoes from Samarra", Journal of Archaeological Science 34 (2007) 756-762.]

Prints are organized in sequential number following publication series, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra." They are arranged in photo file folders which are housed in document boxes, and stored on shelves.

Title is provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Friedrich Sarre's publication, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3: Die Malereien von Samarra."

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1912 and 1913.

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "Samarra was founded by the Abbasid Caliph al-Mu'tasim (r. 833-842) in 836 AD to serve as his imperial capital. [...] The construction of the many mosques and palaces at Samarra fostered an early flowering of architectural decoration. What mainly survives today are wall revetments in carved stucco and wall paintings on fine gypsum surfaces. Earlier Iranian (Sassanian) decorative styles influenced much of the carved stucco panels found at Samarra. The decoration was primarily based on vegetal forms but later developed into more abstract motifs. The wall paintings illustrate a wide range of subjects such as geometric patterns and courtly scenes with figurative representations of listening and playing music, banqueting and dancing. Depictions of animals, especially camels and birds also feature on fragments recovered from the site. [...] Construction halted at Samarra in about 880 AD and later was abandoned by the Caliph and his court in 892." [Lucia Burgio, Robin J.H. Clark, Mariam Rosser-Owen, "Raman analysis of ninth-century Iraqi stuccoes from Samarra", Journal of Archaeological Science 34 (2007) 756-762.]

Prints are organized in sequential number following publication series, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra." They are arranged in photo file folders which are housed in document boxes, and stored on shelves.

Title is provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Friedrich Sarre's publication, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3: Die Malereien von Samarra."

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1912 and 1913.

Original publication caption reads, "Djawsaq, Harem. Gemälde im kuppelscheitel: Stehende frauen und vögel. Gewandstück und Frauenkopf." [Herzfeld, Ernst, 1927: "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3; Die Malereien von Samarra. Verlag Dietrich Reimer Ernst Vohsen, Berlin. Pp. 32-34, and Plate XXXI, top.]

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "Samarra was founded by the Abbasid Caliph al-Mu'tasim (r. 833-842) in 836 AD to serve as his imperial capital. [...] The construction of the many mosques and palaces at Samarra fostered an early flowering of architectural decoration. What mainly survives today are wall revetments in carved stucco and wall paintings on fine gypsum surfaces. Earlier Iranian (Sassanian) decorative styles influenced much of the carved stucco panels found at Samarra. The decoration was primarily based on vegetal forms but later developed into more abstract motifs. The wall paintings illustrate a wide range of subjects such as geometric patterns and courtly scenes with figurative representations of listening and playing music, banqueting and dancing. Depictions of animals, especially camels and birds also feature on fragments recovered from the site. [...] Construction halted at Samarra in about 880 AD and later was abandoned by the Caliph and his court in 892." [Lucia Burgio, Robin J.H. Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1912 and 1913.

Original publication caption reads, "Djawsaq, Harem. Die darstellung der gewänder und die stoffmuster. Kleine Frauenkopfe und Hände von verschiedenen Bildern." [Herzfeld, Ernst, 1927: "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3; Die Malereien von Samarra. Verlag Dietrich Reimer Ernst Vohsen, Berlin. Pp. 62-80; Plate XXXVII, bottom.]

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "Samarra was founded by the Abbasid Caliph al-Mu'tasim (r. 833-842) in 836 AD to serve as his imperial capital. [...] The construction of the many mosques and palaces at Samarra fostered an early flowering of architectural decoration. What mainly survives today are wall revetments in carved stucco and wall paintings on fine gypsum surfaces. Earlier Iranian (Sassanian) decorative styles influenced much of the carved stucco panels found at Samarra. The decoration was primarily based on vegetal forms but later developed into more abstract motifs. The wall paintings illustrate a wide range of subjects such as geometric patterns and courtly scenes with figurative representations of listening and playing music, banqueting and dancing. Depictions of animals, especially camels and birds also feature on fragments recovered from the site. [...] Construction halted at Samarra in about 880 AD and later was abandoned by the Caliph and his court in 892." [Lucia Burgio, Robin J.H. Clark, Mariam Rosser-Owen, "Raman analysis of ninth-century Iraqi stuccoes from Samarra", Journal of Archaeological Science 34 (2007) 756-762.]

Prints are organized in sequential number following publication series, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra." They are arranged in photo file folders which are housed in document boxes, and stored on shelves.

Title is provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Friedrich Sarre's publication, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3: Die Malereien von Samarra."

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1912 and 1913.

Original publication caption reads, "Djausaq, Harem. Nereiden und tiere im wasser. Fries von Enten in Wellenranken." [Herzfeld, Ernst, 1927: "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3; Die Malereien von Samarra. Verlag Dietrich Reimer Ernst Vohsen, Berlin. Pp. 34-37; Plates LVI, bottom.]

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "Samarra was founded by the Abbasid Caliph al-Mu'tasim (r. 833-842) in 836 AD to serve as his imperial capital. [...] The construction of the many mosques and palaces at Samarra fostered an early flowering of architectural decoration. What mainly survives today are wall revetments in carved stucco and wall paintings on fine gypsum surfaces. Earlier Iranian (Sassanian) decorative styles influenced much of the carved stucco panels found at Samarra. The decoration was primarily based on vegetal forms but later developed into more abstract motifs. The wall paintings illustrate a wide range of subjects such as geometric patterns and courtly scenes with figurative representations of listening and playing music, banqueting and dancing. Depictions of animals, especially camels and birds also feature on fragments recovered from the site. [...] Construction halted at Samarra in about 880 AD and later was abandoned by the Caliph and his court in 892." [Lucia Burgio, Robin J.H. Clark, Mariam Rosser-Owen, "Raman analysis of ninth-century Iraqi stuccoes from Samarra", Journal of Archaeological Science 34 (2007) 756-762.]

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative."

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1912 and 1913.

Original publication caption reads, "Nereiden und tiere im wasser. Fischerin und Rahmen (a, d). Frauenköpfe vom Najaden Bilde (b, c). Fries von Reihern (e)." [Herzfeld, Ernst, 1927: "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3; Die Malereien von Samarra. Verlag Dietrich Reimer Ernst Vohsen, Berlin. Pp. 34-37; Plates LI, top; LII; LIII, top; LIV; and LVI, top.]

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "Samarra was founded by the Abbasid Caliph al-Mu'tasim (r. 833-842) in 836 AD to serve as his imperial capital. [...] The construction of the many mosques and palaces at Samarra fostered an early flowering of architectural decoration. What mainly survives today are wall revetments in carved stucco and wall paintings on fine gypsum surfaces. Earlier Iranian (Sassanian) decorative styles influenced much of the carved stucco panels found at Samarra. The decoration was primarily based on vegetal forms but later developed into more abstract motifs. The wall paintings illustrate a wide range of subjects such as geometric patterns and courtly scenes with figurative representations of listening and playing music, banqueting and dancing. Depictions of animals, especially camels and birds also feature on fragments recovered from the site. [...] Construction halted at Samarra in about 880 AD and later was abandoned by the Caliph and his court in 892." [Lucia Burgio, Robin J.H. Clark, Mariam Rosser-Owen, "Raman analysis of ninth-century Iraqi stuccoes from Samarra", Journal of Archaeological Science 34 (2007) 756-762.]

Prints are organized in sequential number following publication series, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra." They are arranged in photo file folders which are housed in document boxes, and stored on shelves.

Title is provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Friedrich Sarre's publication, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3: Die Malereien von Samarra."

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1912 and 1913.

Original publication caption reads, "Djusaq, Thronsäle. Die Bildsäulen. Oberkörper einer Frau und Teil eines Frauenkopfes." [Herzfeld, Ernst, 1927: "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3; Die Malereien von Samarra. Verlag Dietrich Reimer Ernst Vohsen, Berlin. Pp. 84-99; Plate LXX.]

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "Samarra was founded by the Abbasid Caliph al-Mu'tasim (r. 833-842) in 836 AD to serve as his imperial capital. [...] The construction of the many mosques and palaces at Samarra fostered an early flowering of architectural decoration. What mainly survives today are wall revetments in carved stucco and wall paintings on fine gypsum surfaces. Earlier Iranian (Sassanian) decorative styles influenced much of the carved stucco panels found at Samarra. The decoration was primarily based on vegetal forms but later developed into more abstract motifs. The wall paintings illustrate a wide range of subjects such as geometric patterns and courtly scenes with figurative representations of listening and playing music, banqueting and dancing. Prints are organized in sequential number following publication series, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra." They are arranged in photo file folders which are housed in document boxes, and stored on shelves.

Title is provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Friedrich Sarre's publication, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3: Die Malereien von Samarra."

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1912 and 1913.

Original publication caption reads, "Djawsaq, Sardâb. Die Kamelfriese. Kamelköpfe." [Herzfeld, Ernst, 1927: "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3; Die Malereien von Samarra. Verlag Dietrich Reimer Ernst Vohsen, Berlin. Pp. 100-105; Plate LXXIX, top.]

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "Samarra was founded by the Abbasid Caliph al-Mu'tasim (r. 833-842) in 836 AD to serve as his imperial capital. [...] The construction of the many mosques and palaces at Samarra fostered an early flowering of architectural decoration. What mainly survives today are wall revetments in carved stucco and wall paintings on fine gypsum surfaces. Earlier Iranian (Sassanian) decorative styles influenced much of the carved stucco panels found at Samarra. The decoration was primarily based on vegetal forms but later developed into more abstract motifs. The wall paintings illustrate a wide range of subjects such as geometric patterns and courtly scenes with figurative representations of listening and playing music, banqueting and dancing. Depictions of animals, especially camels and birds also feature on fragments recovered from the site. [...] Construction halted at Samarra in about 880 AD and later was abandoned by the Caliph and his court in 892." [Lucia Burgio, Robin J.H. Clark, Mariam Rosser-Owen, "Raman analysis of ninth-century Iraqi stuccoes from Samarra", Journal of Archaeological Science 34 (2007) 756-762.]

Prints are organized in sequential number following publication series, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra." They are arranged in photo file folders which are housed in document boxes, and stored on shelves.

Title is provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Friedrich Sarre's publication, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3: Die Malereien von Samarra."

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1912 and 1913.

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "Samarra was founded by the Abbasid Caliph al-Mu'tasim (r. 833-842) in 836 AD to serve as his imperial capital. [...] The construction of the many mosques and palaces at Samarra fostered an early flowering of architectural decoration. What mainly survives today are wall revetments in carved stucco and wall paintings on fine gypsum surfaces. Earlier Iranian (Sassanian) decorative styles influenced much of the carved stucco panels found at Samarra. The decoration was primarily based on vegetal forms but later developed into more abstract motifs. The wall paintings illustrate a wide range of subjects such as geometric patterns and courtly scenes with figurative representations of listening and playing music, banqueting and dancing. Depictions of animals, especially camels and birds also feature on fragments recovered from the site. [...] Construction halted at Samarra in about 880 AD and later was abandoned by the Caliph and his court in 892." [Lucia Burgio, Robin J.H. Clark, Mariam Rosser-Owen, "Raman analysis of ninth-century Iraqi stuccoes from Samarra", Journal of Archaeological Science 34 (2007) 756-762.]

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative. Possible Inventory Number, based on Finds Journal: IN-821."

Prints are organized in sequential number following publication series, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra." They are arranged in photo file folders which are housed in document boxes, and stored on shelves.

- Title is provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Friedrich Sarre's publication, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra, vol. 3: Die Malereien von Samarra."

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1912 and 1913.

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "Samarra was founded by the Abbasid Caliph al-Mu'tasim (r. 833-842) in 836 AD to serve as his imperial capital. [...] The construction of the many mosques and palaces at Samarra fostered an early flowering of architectural decoration. What mainly survives today are wall revetments in carved stucco and wall paintings on fine gypsum surfaces. Earlier Iranian (Sassanian) decorative styles influenced much of the carved stucco panels found at Samarra. The decoration was primarily based on vegetal forms but later developed into more abstract motifs. The wall paintings illustrate a wide range of subjects such as geometric patterns and courtly scenes with figurative representations of listening and playing music, banqueting and dancing. Depictions of animals, especially camels and birds also feature on fragments recovered from the site. [...] Construction halted at Samarra in about 880 AD and later was abandoned by the Caliph and his court in 892." [Lucia Burgio, Robin J.H. Subseries 4.22: Photo File 22: Samarra: Paläste und Moscheen--I, 1911-1948

212 Photographic prints (Volume one: 5 folders; b&w; 29.2 cm. x 22.8 cm.)

Creator: Herzfeld, Ernst, 1879-1948
Scope and Contents: The records regarding the excavations at Samarra are listed under the series S-1 through S-41. The drawings are given in the Index of Drawings: D-1016--140 and D-1234--237. With a few exceptions, noted in the Photo Files, the negatives are not in the collection.

Herzfeld apparently envisaged one or two volumes of the Samarra series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. Files 22 and 23 were Albums of photos arranged, perhaps, in a tentative order. The only identification was written on the backs of the prints which were glued to the Album page. In removing for re-mounting, the writing was sometimes damaged by the glue. All that was legible is noted.

The first number is in red crayon and is the number used in the captions as the negative number. In some cases, an additional number is given in blue crayon, possibly indicating a revision of the list or an alternative negative. The encircled number on the margin gives the position in the Album. There is in the collection a package of duplicate prints of many of these which are, for the most part, unpublished. They should be studied in conjunction with the Sketchbooks, Notebooks, drawings and; File 19, Die Wandschmuck.

- "Photo File 22", which was assembled by Joseph Upton, provides 212 photographic prints of potential illustrations in Herzfeld's unpublished publication, "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra: Paläste und Moscheen von Samarra, I und II." The albums (Photo File 22 and Photo File 23) apparently were prepared by Herzfeld with a view to a publication of the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses of Samarra.

FSA A.06 04.PF.22.009

In early 1970s, Joseph Upton has organized the prints in sequential number following planned but never published volumes of the "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra" series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. In early 1990s, FSg Archives re-numbered the pages included in the photo file folders and re-housed them in document boxes, stored on shelves.

- Accession number and title are provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive.

- Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative."

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1913.

- Original Caption transcribed by Joseph Upton reads, "59. Bait al-Khalīfah. Torbau vom O.rücken."

- Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative. Print marked with Herzfeld's original seal."

These two Albums apparently were arranged by Herzfeld with a view to a publication of the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses of Samarra which was never prepared. According to Joseph Upton, the only identification, written on the backs of the prints which were glued to the Album page, had a first number in red crayon used in the captions as the negative number. In some cases, an additional number is given in blue crayon, possibly indicating a revision of the list or an alternative negative. A set of photograph duplicates, with handwritten annotations, in black, red, and blue, seem to confirm Upton's findings.

- Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative."

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1913.

- Original Caption transcribed by Joseph Upton reads, "71. Bait al-Khalīfa. Antichambres, Verzweigungsstelle d. Leitung."

- Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative. Print marked with Herzfeld's original seal."

In early 1970s, Joseph Upton has organized the prints in sequential number following planned but never published volumes of the "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra" series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. In early 1990s, FSg Archives re-numbered the pages included in the photo file folders and re-housed them in document boxes, stored on shelves.

- Accession number and title are provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive.

- Accession number and title are provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive.

- Photo File 22 and Photo File 23 were arranged in Albums labeled "Paläste und Moscheen-I and -II", respectively. These two Albums apparently were arranged by Herzfeld with a view to a publication of the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses of Samarra which was never prepared. According to Joseph Upton, the only identification, written on the backs of the prints which were glued to the Album page, had a first number in red crayon used in the captions as the negative number. In some cases, an additional number is given in blue crayon, possibly indicating a revision of the list or an alternative negative. A set of photograph duplicates, with handwritten annotations, in black, red, and blue, seem to confirm Upton's findings.

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1913.

- Original Caption transcribed by Joseph Upton reads, "218. Hohlkehlenprofil und Friesornament. Lower pc. N. Pavillon, östl. Īwān."

- Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative."

In early 1970s, Joseph Upton has organized the prints in sequential number following planned but never published volumes of the "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra" series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. In early 1990s, FSg Archives re-numbered the pages included in the photo file folders and re-housed them in document boxes, stored on shelves.

possibly indicating a revision of the list or an alternative negative. A set of photograph duplicates, with handwritten annotations, in black, red, and blue, seem to confirm Upton's findings.

FSA A.06 04.PF.22.053

In early 1970s, Joseph Upton has organized the prints in sequential number following planned but never published volumes of the "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra" series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. In early 1990s, FSg Archives re-numbered the pages included in the photo file folders and re-housed them in document boxes, stored on shelves.

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1913.

Original Caption transcribed by Joseph Upton reads, "116. Bait al-Khalīfa. [in blue: 167]Wand (?) im SW-Winkel der [Cruciform]-Säle mit Marmor (Platten)."

- Photo File 22 and Photo File 23 were arranged in Albums labeled "Paläste und Moscheen-I and -II", respectively. These two Albums apparently were arranged by Herzfeld with a view to a publication of the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses of Samarra which was never prepared. According to Joseph Upton, the only identification, written on the backs of the prints which were glued to the Album page, had a first number in red crayon used in the captions as the negative number. In some cases, an additional number is given in blue crayon, possibly indicating a revision of the list or an alternative negative. A set of photograph duplicates, with handwritten annotations, in black, red, and blue, seem to confirm Upton's findings.

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1913.

Handwritten annotation on photograph reads, "684 [IN-684]; Phot. 129."

Original Caption transcribed by Joseph Upton reads, "311. aus stadtgebiet gekauft."

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative."

In early 1970s, Joseph Upton has organized the prints in sequential number following planned but never published volumes of the "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra" series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. In early 1990s, FSg Archives re-numbered the pages included in the photo file folders and re-housed them in document boxes, stored on shelves.

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1913.

- Original Caption transcribed by Joseph Upton reads, "144. Bait al-Khalīfa. Harem, Basilikaler Saal. 143."

- Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative."

In early 1970s, Joseph Upton has organized the prints in sequential number following planned but never published volumes of the "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra" series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. In early 1990s, FSg Archives re-numbered the pages included in the photo file folders and re-housed them in document boxes, stored on shelves.

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1913.

Handwritten annotation on photograph reads, "neg.885; IN828 [IN-828]."

In early 1970s, Joseph Upton has organized the prints in sequential number following planned but never published volumes of the "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra" series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. In early 1990s, FSg Archives re-numbered the pages included in the photo file folders and re-housed them in document boxes, stored on shelves.

- Photo File 22 and Photo File 23 were arranged in Albums labeled "Paläste und Moscheen-I and -II", respectively. These two Albums apparently were arranged by Herzfeld with a view to a publication of the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses of Samarra which was never prepared. According to Joseph Upton, the only identification, written on the backs of the prints which were glued to the Album page, had a first number in red crayon used in the captions as the negative number.

In some cases, an additional number is given in blue crayon, possibly indicating a revision of the list or an alternative negative. A set of photograph duplicates, with handwritten annotations, in black, red, and blue, seem to confirm Upton's findings.

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1913.

Original Caption transcribed by Joseph Upton reads, "165. Ḥabīyyah (Hadiyyah) Rung(?) gewölbte - Ansatz."

Original photograph number given in red reads, "165."

Notes: File 22-26-110
FSA A.06 04.PF.22.110

In early 1970s, Joseph Upton has organized the prints in sequential number following planned but never published volumes of the "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra" series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. In early 1990s, FSg Archives re-numbered the pages included in the photo file folders and re-housed them in document boxes, stored on shelves.

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1913.

Original Caption transcribed by Joseph Upton reads, "170. [in blue: 252] IN-750, 801 [IN-801], 856 [IN-856]."

Original photograph number given in blue, possibly indicating a revision, reads, "252."

FSA A.06 04.PF.22.121

In early 1970s, Joseph Upton has organized the prints in sequential number following planned but never published volumes of the "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra" series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. In early 1990s, FSg Archives re-numbered the pages included in the photo file folders and re-housed them in document boxes, stored on shelves.

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1913.

Original Caption transcribed by Joseph Upton reads, "183. Bait al-Khalīfa. N.O. Ecke d. Esplanade ... Mauern und Kanalen."

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative."

In early 1970s, Joseph Upton has organized the prints in sequential number following planned but never published volumes of the "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra" series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. In early 1990s, FSg Archives re-numbered the pages included in the photo file folders and re-housed them in document boxes, stored on shelves.

- Accession number and title are provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive.

- Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative."

In early 1970s, Joseph Upton has organized the prints in sequential number following planned but never published volumes of the "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra" series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. In early 1990s, FSg Archives re-numbered the pages included in the photo file folders and re-housed them in document boxes, stored on shelves.

- Accession number and title are provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive.

- Accession number and title are provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive.

- Photo File 22 and Photo File 23 were arranged in Albums labeled "Paläste und Moscheen-I and -II", respectively. These two Albums apparently were arranged by Herzfeld with a view to a publication of the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses of Samarra which was never prepared. According to Joseph Upton, the only identification, written on the backs of the prints which were glued to the Album page, had a first number in red crayon used in the captions as the negative number. In some cases, an additional number is given in blue crayon, possibly indicating a revision of the list or an alternative negative. A set of photograph duplicates, with handwritten annotations, in black, red, and blue, seem to confirm Upton's findings.

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1913.

Original Caption transcribed by Joseph Upton reads, "94. IN-888, Photo 362, Grosses Glas-schild von Wandornament."

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative."

In early 1970s, Joseph Upton has organized the prints in sequential number following planned but never published volumes of the "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra" series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. In early 1990s, FSg Archives re-numbered the pages included in the photo file folders and re-housed them in document boxes, stored on shelves.

- Accession number and title are provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive.

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1913.

Original Caption transcribed by Joseph Upton reads, "123 [in blue: 543] Photo 246. Raum östl. Haremshof an Esplanade."

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative. Possible Inventory Number, based on Finds Journal: IN-803."

In early 1970s, Joseph Upton has organized the prints in sequential number following planned but never published volumes of the "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra" series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. In early 1990s, FSg Archives re-numbered the pages included in the photo file folders and re-housed them in document boxes, stored on shelves.

- Accession number and title are provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive.

to a publication of the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses of Samarra which was never prepared. According to Joseph Upton, the only identification, written on the backs of the prints which were glued to the Album page, had a first number in red crayon used in the captions as the negative number. In some cases, an additional number is given in blue crayon, possibly indicating a revision of the list or an alternative negative. A set of photograph duplicates, with handwritten annotations, in black, red, and blue, seem to confirm Upton's findings.

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1913.

Handwritten annotation on photograph reads, "631 [IN-631]."

Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative."

In early 1970s, Joseph Upton has organized the prints in sequential number following planned but never published volumes of the "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra" series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. In early 1990s, FSg Archives re-numbered the pages included in the photo file folders and re-housed them in document boxes, stored on shelves.

- Accession number and title are provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive.

FSA A.06 04.PF.22.202

In early 1970s, Joseph Upton has organized the prints in sequential number following planned but never published volumes of the "Die Ausgrabungen von Samarra" series to deal with the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses. In early 1990s, FSg Archives re-numbered the pages included in the photo file folders and re-housed them in document boxes, stored on shelves.

- Accession number and title are provided by Xavier Courouble, FSg Archives cataloger, based on Joseph Upton's Catalogue of the Herzfeld Archive.

- Photo File 22 and Photo File 23 were arranged in Albums labeled "Paläste und Moscheen-I and -II", respectively. These two Albums apparently were arranged by Herzfeld with a view to a publication of the architecture of the palaces, mosques and private houses of Samarra which was never prepared. According to Joseph Upton, the only identification, written on the backs of the prints which were glued to the Album page, had a first number in red crayon used in the captions as the negative number. In some cases, an additional number is given in blue crayon, possibly indicating a revision of the list or an alternative negative. A set of photograph duplicates, with handwritten annotations, in black, red, and blue, seem to confirm Upton's findings.

- Additional information from Archives staff reads, "No existing negative."

Prints related primarily to the second campaign of excavation at Sāmarrā' (Iraq), carried out by Ernst Herzfeld on behalf of the Kaiser Friedrich Museum in Berlin in 1913.
