University of California San Francisco

Drug Industry Documents was created by the University of California San Francisco Library in collaboration with faculty members C. Seth Landefeld, MD and Michael Steinman, MD. Originally established to house documents from an off-label marketing lawsuit against Parke-Davis (United States of America ex rel. David Franklin vs. Parke-Davis), the archive has grown to include documents from additional sources illustrating how the pharmaceutical industry, academic journals and institutions, continuing medical education organizations and regulatory/funding agencies operate in ways that are detrimental to public health.

Processing Information

The original acquisition in 1982 was processed by Robert S. Harding, archivist, 1983. Subsequent accruals were processed by Alison Oswald, archivist, between 2019-2021. Substantial portions of the records were reorganized between 2019-2021 into a more coherent arrangement, and new series were created to bring similar material together.

The original arrangement and folder titles were retained in most cases.

Historical

Parke, Davis and Company traces its origins to Samuel Pearce Duffield (1833-1916), a physician and pharmacist. Duffield was born in Carlisle, Pennsylvania and his family moved to Detroit when he was an infant. Duffield graduated from the University of Michigan in 1854 and he attended medical school at the University of Pennsylvania, latter leaving for Germany where he studied chemistry and sought treatment for his eyesight. He subsequently earned a Doctor of Philosophy from Ludwig University at Giessen in Germany. Duffield returned to Detroit in 1858 and established a retail drugstore with a strong interest in manufacturing pharmaceuticals. Duffield sought financial partners for his retail and manufacturing venture with A.L. Patrick and Francis C. Conant. Both men retracted their investments and Duffield met Hervey Coke Parke (1927-1899), a native of Bloomfield Hills, Michigan.

Duffield and Parke formed a formal partnership in 1866. George S. Davis, a third partner and traveling salesman previously with Farrand, Sheley and Company, was added 1867. Augustus F. Jennings joined the company as a partner to head manufacturing. The company became known as Duffield, Parke, Davis, & Jennings Company. Duffield withdrew in 1869 and the name Parke, Davis & Company was adopted in 1871. The company incorporated in 1875 and began planning world-wide scientific expeditions to discover new vegetable drugs such as Guarana, Bearsfoot, Eucalyptus Globulus, and Coca. The company first showed a profit in 1876, and the first dividend paid to shareholders in 1878 and dividends paid until mid-1960s. Research was a major activity of the company.

In 1907, Parke, Davis and Company bought 340 acres in northeast Avon Township, Michigan, and called it Parkedale Farm. The farm was dedicated on October 8, 1908, and included sterilization rooms and a vaccine propagating building. By 1909 the farm included 200 horses, 25 to 50 cattle, 150 sheep, and employed 20 men. The horses produced the antitoxin for diphtheria and tetanus, the cattle produced a vaccine for smallpox preventatives, and the sheep made serum. Only the healthiest animals were used and all were well cared for. Exotic plants were also grown on the site and used for drugs. Parke-Davis' chief products were antitoxins and vaccines as well as farm crops for feeding the animals. The farm continued to produce vaccines for diphtheria, scarlet fever, tetanus, smallpox, anthrax, and in the 1950s, the Salk polio vaccine.

Due to a weakening financial position, the company became susceptible to take-over, and was purchased by Warner-Lambert in 1970. Warner Lambert, was then acquired by Pfizer in 2000. In 2007, Pfizer closed its research facilities in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Parke, Davis and Company. Parke-Davis At 100...progress in the past...promise for the future. Detroit, Michigan, 1966.

Scope and Contents

The collection documents Parke, Davis and Company, one of America's oldest and largest drug makers. Parke, Davis had the first research laboratory in the American pharmaceutical industry. The company played a major role in the development of some of the principle new drugs of the twentieth century and pioneered the field of drug standardization. They were one of the first American firms to produce antitoxins, hormones, and other biologicals. They introduced new and important drugs such as adrenalin, dilantin, chlorenpleniol, and other antibiotics. They also did important research on vitamins, disinfectants, and pencillin.

The collection contains complete documentaion of all the research activities done, including research laboratory notes, correspondence, and published papers. The collection also contains corporate, financial, advertising and sales materials, photographs, and audiovisual materials. The collection is important for those researchers interested in the history of public health, the history of biologicals, pharmaceutical manufacturing and business history.

Subseries 6.2: Individual Laboratory Notebooks, 1907-1968

Scope and Contents: This subseries consists of 576 notebooks documenting individual researcher's laboratory notes. Indexed by topic, these notes are typed and bound usually on an annual basis. These volumes were compiled to document all research performed for Parke Davis by a laboratory researcher whether the investigations became important to the company or not. They are arranged alphabetically by scientist name and chronologically by the years of employment in the lab. The content is generally the same as the company lab records, but the scope of research is much broader in the personal notes.

Series 7: Control Department Records, 1884-1931

Scope and Contents: The Control Department Records consist primarily of typescript and handwritten reports/internal memos for various preparations (tablets and fluids) manufactured by Parke, Davis. The reports detail the composition of a certain drug, manufacturing details, price lists, articles, and testing information. The reports/memos are arranged broadly into categories such as solids and powdered extracts, pills, and tablets and within each category it is arranged alphabetically by the name of the drug. Many of the reports/memos are stamped with the names "Miss Burnham," presumably a secretary and "Leon C. Fink," presumably a superintendent.

This series also consists of circulars, notices mailed to companies, druggists, pharmacists, and individuals. Included are schedules for finishing numbers for lots of pharmaceuticals, instructions, materials published by the Scientific Department of Parke, Davis and reprints of articles from journals.

Series 8: Formulas, 1882-10-04-1967

Scope and Contents: This series contains formulas and formula ledgers (bound formula cards). All formula cards were assigned a "process number" which subsequently appeared on all labels, trays, cans, boxes or other containers used in the manufacture of a particular drug. The number allowed Parke, Davis to track the complete history of each manufacturing operation including the names of individuals who may have been involved in the process. The cards contain the name of the drug, the department name, date, Rx number, mass, coating, yield, cost, and remarks. Other materials include handwritten and typescript notes, final discontinuance notices, and memoranda.
