Administrative Information

Acquisition Information

Donated by the AB Note Company of Fort Lee, New Jersey in 2012.

Provenance

In 2003, the American Bank Note Company contacted the National Museum of American History about surplus objects such as dies, printing plates and other three-dimensional objects, regarding a possible deaccession, and inquiring whether the National Numismatic Collection was interested in acquiring these items. NMAH volunteer Peter Huntoon surveyed the items proposed for deaccession, and acquired a large number of objects for the NNC. Along with these objects, Mr. Huntoon was also allowed access to archival materials, and brought back this collection of correspondence, business files, photographs and photograph albums, and a motion picture film.

Processing Information

Biographical / Historical

First founded in 1795 as Murray, Draper, Fairham & Company, the American Bank Note Company developed into the United States' foremost high security engraving and printing firm in the years prior to the Civil War. It produced paper money, postage stamps, stock and bond certificates. After the Civil War, it produced paper money and stamps for foreign governments, including Canada and Haiti. In 1879, it merged with the National Bank Note and Continental Bank Note companies.

Scope and Contents

The collection includes correspondence with various banks and foreign governments, especially those of Canadian provinces, regarding their banknotes or postal stamps; client files, mostly with various companies that contracted with American Bank Note Company to engrave their stock certificates, but also including files regarding two engravers, Herman Ochs and Charles Brooks, who worked for ABNC; framed items including photographs and letters of appreciation; photographs and photograph albums, showing interior scenes of the ABNC's plants, shop floors with employees at work in various aspects of production, plant facilities such as the cafeteria and the hospital, plant expansion or renovation, and exteriors of the plants.

[American Bank Note Film], 1912

1 Motion picture film (black and white silent print edge code date: 1923 cement splices copy probably made from circa 1912 original nitrate negative which no longer exists; 35mm)

Protection: 35mm black and white check print, 3 reels Reference: DVD

Produced from the archival original 35mm black and white silent print by Colorlab in 2013

Reference DVD available.

The footage in the American Bank Note Film matches the images in the photograph albums. The filming date of 1912 was determined by comparing the film to the photographs. The 35mm black and white silent print donated to the Archives Center has an edge code date of 1923. It was probably printed from the original 35mm black and white negative which no longer exists. The film appears to have been minimally edited with cement splices throughout and intertitles.
