Administrative Information

Acquisition Information

The bulk of the George Grey Barnard papers were transferred from the Smithsonian American Art Museum (formerly the National Collection of Fine Arts) in 1975 and 2003, where the artist's son, Monroe Barnard, had given it in 1970. In 1971, Monroe donated the Archives of American Art additional papers, the Pennsylvania State University Archives gave more material in 1976, and the Philadelphia Museum of Art loaned 4.0 linear feet of material for microfilming in 1985.

Separated Materials

The Archives of American Art also holds microfilm of material lent for microfilming (reels 3658-3664) including correspondence, exhibition files, and sketches. Originals of microfilmed items can be found at the Philadelphia Museum of Art. This material has not been described in the collection container inventory.

Related Archival Materials

Additional George Grey Barnard papers are available at the Philadelphia Museum of Art.

Available Formats

The bulk of the collection was digitized in 2012 and is available via the Archives of American Art's website. Selected financial records, photographs of works of art, some business records, and printed materials have not been scanned.

Material lent for microfilming is available on 35mm microfilm reel 3658-3664 at the Archives of American Art offices and through interlibrary loan.

Processing Information

Select records, primarily correspondence and photographs of Barnard's sculptures were microfilmed on reels 118 and 1116; these reels are no longer in circulation. The entire collection was fully processed, arranged, and described by Kathleen Brown in 2009 and scanned in 2012 with funding provided by the Terra Foundation for American Art.

Processing of glass plate negatives and lantern slides was completed in 2014 by Anna Rimel with funding provided by the Smithsonian Collections Care and Preservation Fund.

Biographical Note

George Grey Barnard (1863-1938) was an American sculptor, collector, and dealer, whose collection of medieval art formed the nucleus of the Cloisters, the branch of the Metropolitan Museum of Art dedicated to the art of the middle ages. Barnard was born to a Presbyterian minister and his wife in Bellefonte, Pennsylvania in 1863. While he was still a young boy, the family left Pennsylvania for the Midwest, eventually settling in Muscatine, Iowa. He married Edna Monroe in 1895 and had three children: Monroe, Vivia, and Barbara.

Barnard began studying sculpture in his late teens, first with Leonard Volk, then at the Art Institute of Chicago, where he studied from 1882 until he left for Paris the following year. In Paris he received training from Pierre-Jules Cavelier at the Ecole des Beaux-Arts. In 1900 he earned a gold medal at the Salon of the Champs de Mars in Paris.

While in France, Barnard began scavenging the countryside for discarded medieval antiques. He was in debt most of his life, and sold these pieces to support his family and fund his work. He retained the best finds which eventually formed his two medieval collections. The first was the Cloisters, which he sold to John D. Rockefeller Jr. in 1925. The second was the Abbaye, which he completed in 1937. This collection was sold by his estate to the Philadelphia Museum of Art in 1945.

Returning to America, he completed both public and private commissions. In 1902, he was commissioned to create sculptures for the new state capitol building in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. In 1915, he was commissioned by Charles P. Taft to create an Abraham Lincoln statue for Cincinnati. The statue was erected in 1917 and portrayed Lincoln as gangly, frail, and emotional. A second casting was to be given to Westminster Abbey, but controversy over this representation eventually led to its transfer to Manchester.

George Grey Barnard was deeply affected by the devastation of World War I. He devoted the rest of his life to building a memorial to peace, called the Rainbow Arch. It would have been dedicated to the Mothers of America and paid for solely from his own funds and coins contributed by children. Although he spent all his resources on the arch, he only completed a plaster model before his death. George Grey Barnard died of a heart attack in 1938.

Container Listing

Series 1: Biographical Material, circa 1888-1955

0.25 Linear feet (Boxes 1 and 15)

Scope and Contents: This series records George Grey Barnard's personal biography, family genealogy, friends, and associations. Files contain address books; biographical notes written for reference resources such as Who's Who, National Social Blue Book, Cyclopedia of American Biography; family genealogies and family histories; legal documents such as George Grey Barnard's and his wife Edna's last will and testament, and the sale of land to Metropolitan Museum of Art; a diploma belonging to his father Rev. Joseph Barnard; ephemera including membership cards; and a set of unidentified hand prints. Lists of "prospects" include individuals whom Barnard identified as likely clients for his own sculpture, for the medieval art and artifacts that he sold to prominent museums and collectors, or for those likely to offer to contribute financial assistance to aid in the completion of his war memorial, Rainbow Arch. There is also a select list of his funeral attendees and miscellaneous additional data about "the Monastery" (Abbaye).

Arrangement: Biographical materials are arranged alphabetically according to material type and then chronologically within the files.

Available Formats: This series has been scanned in its entirety.

Series 2: Correspondence, circa 1896-1965

0.7 Linear feet (Box 1)

Scope and Contents: This series contains the personal and business correspondence of George Grey Barnard until his death in 1938. Later correspondence consists of the incoming and outgoing correspondence of Barnard's son, Monroe Grey Barnard, mostly in connection with his father's estate and in letters to art historian and Barnard scholar, Harold E. Dickson.

Correspondents include art and antiques dealers, museum directors, curators, and galleries, as well as individuals whom Barnard identified as 'prospects' for either his own sculptural projects or medieval antiquities in his collection. Frequent correspondents include art and antiques dealers M. Dagrass et Fils, C. Joret, Ste. Galleries Schutz, D.W. French and Co.; museum directors Edward Forbes (Fogg Art Museum, Harvard University), Robert DeForest (Metropolitan Museum of Art), Fiske Kimball (Philadelphia Museum of Art); and art patrons Arthur M. Huntington and John Gellatly. Handwritten drafts and typed copies of Barnard's outgoing letters are scattered throughout.

Of particular interest are the letters from the early to mid-1920s, the period during which he was trying to sell the medieval art and architectural elements that made up the George Grey Barnard Cloisters. Individuals wrote with proposals, such as artist Calthea Vivian, who hoped to find a home for the collection in California. Museums that expressed interest include the Toledo Museum of Art. Ultimately the collection was purchased by the Metropolitan Museum of Art, with funds provided by John D. Rockefeller. The 1925 folder contains letters providing details concerning the sales agreement.

Correspondence that post-dates Barnard's death in 1938 includes his son's correspondence with various individuals and institutions concerning his father's estate and the remaining collection of medieval art and architectural elements, which was known as 'The Monastery' or 'The Abbaye.' There is significant correspondence with representatives of the National Cathedral regarding moving the collection to Washington, D.C. However, no correspondence was found relating to the Philadelphia Museum of Art's subsequent acquisition of the bulk of the collection. There is also significant personal correspondence between Monroe and his mother (Edna Monroe Barnard), primarily typed copies of his outgoing letters.

See Appendix for a list of notable correspondents from Series 2

Arrangement: Correspondence is arranged chronologically. A file of undated letters and another that contains a typed list of telegrams and telephone calls has been placed at the end.

Available Formats: This series has been scanned in its entirety.

Series 3: Diaries and Daily Journals, 1900-1938

1 Linear foot (Boxes 1-2)

Scope and Contents: This series consists of three diaries and nine daily journals. Rather than providing detailed accounts of Barnard's life, these diaries and journals document appointments (both personal and studio-related), notable visitors to the artist's studio, progress reports on sculptures, phone calls and correspondence received, as well as letter drafts, favorite quotations and excerpts from newspaper articles. Although some of the entries appear to be in Barnard's hand, many appear to have been made by his secretary. Indeed some pages contain messages from Barnard to his secretary and vice versa.

Arrangement: Diaries and journals are arranged chronologically.

Available Formats: This series has been scanned in its entirety.

Series 4: Writings and Notes, circa 1881-1963

1.6 Linear feet (Boxes 2-4)

Scope and Contents: Writings and notes consists of three small note books, which contain partial drafts of correspondence, as well as typescripts of artist's statements, and notes for an article on the Rainbow Arch Memorial. There is also a proposal by Ruth Morris for a biography of Barnard. The remaining bulk of the series is made up of typescripts of sermons by Joseph Barnard, the artist's father.

Arrangement: Items in this series have been grouped together by material type.

Available Formats: This series has been partially scanned. Typescripts of Joseph Barnard's sermons have not been scanned.

Series 5: Medieval Art and Collections, circa 1905-1958

0.9 Linear feet (Boxes 4, 15, and OV 17)

Scope and Contents: Found in this series are documents that record Barnard's activities as a collector and dealer of Medieval art and artifacts, including collecting notes; inventories; invoices from galleries and dealers; and printed material related to the artist's collections of medieval art (the Cloisters and the Abbaye/Monastery), including signs for both. Other items of note include hand drawn floor plans, one of which appears to be a rough sketch of the layout of the original Cloister, while the other more finished floor plan may be a plan for a medieval cloister (perhaps one that Barnard had purchased in Europe to reconstruct in the United States). Finally there are files related to two projects with the National Cathedral in Washington D.C., the first being the Bishop Garden to which Barnard donated an ancient cross. Barnard may have been the dealer for those who donated other medieval artifacts and architectural elements that decorated the garden. There is a second proposal for a failed project to relocate Barnard's second collection of medieval art and architectural elements to the National Cathedral initiated after the artist's death in 1937 by his son Monroe Barnard.

Barnard's "collecting notes" are found in one folder of loose notes and 13 notebooks of various sizes. These notebooks contain names of dealers, places to visit, as well as descriptions, sketches, and prices of the medieval and renaissance art and artifacts which he collected both for himself and to sell to others. Other notebooks act as shipping inventories. In most of the shipping inventory notebooks, objects are listed by case number and are identified with brief descriptions. The 1926-1928 notebook also identifies the sender, which in most cases appears to be the French galleries/dealers from whom Barnard acquired the objects. There are inventories of Barnard's collections, including a notebook that contains detailed handwritten descriptions of objects in the original Cloisters, as well as a typescript titled Descriptions of Art Objects in the Abbaye, which serves as a narrative guide to the collection. There is also a visitor's book from the Monastery (Abbaye).

Series 6: Business Records, circa 1900-1938

0.9 Linear feet (Boxes 4-5)

Scope and Contents: Business records document the activities of Barnard's studios in Moret, France and New York and include address books, card catalogue cards, employee time books, a studio inventory, and model and studio record books.

Many of the files include information about the models Barnard employed. The address books not only name the models, but in some cases include addresses and brief physical descriptions or annotations regarding the sculpture for which they were employed. Employee time records include models as well as other people whom Barnard employed, including his secretaries and studio assistants. The card catalog was primarily used to record file locations for business files and photographs of Barnard's sculptures. Additionally, a ledger style book labeled as an "Index to Correspondence" on its cover and binding actually served as a studio inventory and documented the box locations, not only of correspondence, but also books, clippings, magazines, and photographs that were moved from the "Billings Studio" to the studio at 700 Fort Washington Avenue in New York.

Arrangement: Files are arranged by format and then in chronological order.

Available: This series has been partially scanned. Employee time books have not been scanned.

Series 7: Financial Records, circa 1920-1941

1.3 Linear feet (Boxes 5-7)

Scope and Contents: Financial Records consists of cash and disbursement books, expense books, and invoices and receipts, which document both studio and household accounts. Expense books mainly record monthly expenses such as studio rent, staff salaries, taxes, and utility bills. There are invoices and receipts from photographers, hardware stores, utilities, art supply stores, as well as for more quotidian expenses ranging from bird feed to medical bills. This series also contains a large number of invoices and receipts specifically stemming from the construction of the Barnard Residence at 191 Street in Fort Washington. Although technically not a financial record, the building specification report is included so as not to be separated from the related receipts and invoices. Additional invoices and receipts for medieval artifacts are located in the Medieval Art and Collections series.

Arrangement: Items in this series have been grouped together by format and then chronologically.

Available Formats: This series has been partially scanned. General invoices and receipts have not been scanned.

Series 8: Printed Material, circa 1890-1969

1.5 Linear feet (Boxes 7-8, 15-16 and BVs 25-26)

Scope and Contents: Found in this series are books, clippings, exhibition catalogs, magazines, pamphlets, postcards, programs, reports, and reproductions of old master prints. The materials found in this series not only document Barnard's life and career as a sculptor and collector, but also the art and architecture that inspired and interested him.

Clippings record his success at the Paris Salon of 1910; the financial problems that plagued the construction of the Pennsylvania State House, which included sculptures by Barnard; his collections of medieval art, primarily the Cloisters; and his plans to create a large memorial sculpture, most commonly referred to as the Rainbow Arch. A folder of exhibition catalogs and programs document both exhibitions of Barnard's work as well as programs from the dedication of his statue of Abraham Lincoln. There are also annotated postcards of Barnard's boyhood hometowns of Kankakee, Illinois and Muscatine, Iowa, as well as another set of postcards that depict the flooding in Moret, France, the location of his studio in the early 1900s.

The bulk of the rest of the material reflects Barnard's influences and interest in art and architecture from the ancient to the modern. Many of the books found in this series are nineteenth and early twentieth century art books consisting of plates of ancient, medieval, and renaissance art and architecture. Additionally there is a folder of modern reproductions of Old Master prints, primarily by Durer, which come from the Parisian book and art dealer, George Rapilly. They are all stamped on the verso "Rapilly - Paris/Hlio - A.D./9, Quai Malaquais." There is another folder of miscellaneous modern print reproductions.

Arrangement: Printed Materials have been arranged alphabetically by format.

Available Formats: This series has been partially scanned. Books, clippings (aside from scrapbooks), magazines, and printed reproductions have not been scanned.

Series 9: Photographs, circa 1860-1963

4.5 Linear feet (Boxes 8-13, 15 and OV 17-24)

Scope and Contents: This series contains vintage photographs, modern copy prints, transparencies and glass plates of Barnard, his family, friends, studios, and sculptures, as well as his collections of medieval art and architectural elements. There is also a large group of study or reference photographs, which are photographs of works of art from ancient to modern periods, with the bulk from the middle ages through the renaissance. Photographs are described in more detail at the subseries level.

Arrangement: The series is arranged as 6 subseries:

Missing Title:

- Series 9.1: Personal Photographs, circa 1860-1963
- Series 9.2: Studio Photographs, circa 1880-1938
- Series 9.3: Medieval Art and Collections, 1905-1945
- Series 9.4: Study Photographs, circa 1882-1938
- Series 9.5: Works of Art, circa 1892-1963
- Series 9.6: Glass Plate Negatives, circa 1900-1945

Available Formats: Glass plate negatives have been digitized

Subseries 9.1: Personal Photographs, circa 1860-1963

Scope and Contents: Found in this subseries are personal photographs and portraits of George Grey Barnard, alone and with others, as well as photographs of family, friends, and family residences. Photographs of George Grey Barnard include a vintage carte-de-visite sized print of the artist as a young child; cabinet cards; portraits by studio photographer George Cox, among other studio portrait photographs; and portraits by well-known photographers Carl van Vechten and Doris Ullman. There are several vintage photographs of Barnard with others, most notably a photograph of Barnard and his father in front of portions of the cloister of Saint-Michel-de-Cuxa, set up outside his "museum" the "Old Cloisters." Additional photographs of Barnard with others can be found in the Studio Photographs subseries.

Family and friends recorded in personal photographs include Martha Grubb Barnard (mother), Joseph Barnard (father), grandparents, Edna Monroe (wife), Evan (brother), and Monroe (son). Scattered within the "Miscellaneous Family" folder are unidentified photographs; these were transferred from a folder of the same name and it is assumed that those depicted are related to Barnard, or perhaps close family friends.

Finally, there is a folder of snapshots of the dedication ceremony of his statue of Lincoln in Cincinnati, Ohio. Although a few of the photographs are inscribed with a date that appears to be "1915" the actual date of the ceremony was March 31, 1917.

Arrangement: Folders are grouped together by subject.

Available Formats: This subseries has been partially scanned. Duplicates have not been scanned.

Subseries 9.2: Studio Photographs, circa 1880-1938

Scope and Contents: Items in this subseries include photographs of Barnard in his studios in Paris and New York, an exterior view of his Ft. Tyron Park studio, and a set of model studies. Scattered amongst the photographs of the Paris and New York studios are vintage prints that feature Barnard at work, including a circa 1916 photograph of the artist on a ladder, working on a colossal plaster head, Lincoln in Thought and an 1885 salted paper print of Barnard in his Paris studio working on Two Natures. Additionally, there are several photographs documenting the flood damage to his studio in Moret, France, which occurred in January of 1910.

Arrangement: Folders are arranged by subject.

Available: This subseries has been scanned in its entirety.

Subseries 9.3: Medieval Art and Collections, circa 1905-1945

Scope and Contents: This subseries documents Barnard's collections of medieval art, the Cloisters and the Abbaye, as well as individual artifacts of medieval and eighteenth century art, which may have passed through his possession in his dual roles as collector and dealer. The photographs of the Cloisters and Abbaye record Barnard's installation of medieval statuary and architectural elements in the space that he, along with his architect, Horace Mann, had created to house his collections. Some of the prints include annotations along the bottom edge or on the verso that date the image as well as provide identifying details for sculptures and studio locations.

The bulk of the photographs document medieval sculptures and architectural elements, ranging from stained glass windows to entire cloisters. Folder titles distinguish amongst "Medieval Artifacts in Their Original Locations," "Medieval Artifacts, France, Collection Files," and "Medieval and Eighteenth Century Art, Dealers Files." These title designations were retained due to possible significance and may reflect Barnard's original file titles.

Arrangement: Files are arranged alphabetically by subject title.

Available Formats: This subseries has been partially scanned. Cloister photographs from the Metropolitan Museum of Art have not been scanned.

Subseries 9.4: Study Photographs, circa 1882-1938

Scope and Contents:	This subseries consists of photographs that were designated as study photographs. They depict a wide variety of works of art by other artists, ranging from ancient art to work created by Barnard's contemporaries. However photographs depicting medieval and Renaissance art and architecture, particularly details from Michaelangelo's Sistine Chapel, form the bulk of this collection. Presumably this collection of reference photographs was assembled and retained by the artist and reflects his interests as well as sources for his own work.
Arrangement:	Folders are grouped into five folders of Medieval Art and Architecture and 14 folders of Ancient to Modern Works of Art, designations that were retained from the previous arrangement. Within the Ancient to Modern Works of Art folders, images are arranged in loose chronological order by creation date of the object depicted.
Available Formats:	This subseries has not been scanned.

Subseries 9.5: Works of Art, circa 1882-1963

Scope and Contents: Photographs in this subseries document all of Barnard's major sculptures from his earliest recognized work Sleeping Boy to the plaster studies for his uncompleted opus, Rainbow Arch. Of particular note are prints of his sculptural commissions for the Pennsylvania State House and his many works depicting Abraham Lincoln. The bulk of the prints are vintage, some of which are mounted on board and inscribed. Several of the early photographs were taken in conjunction with a 1908 exhibition of Barnard's work at the Museum of Fine Arts Boston; the negatives for these images can be found in the Glass Plate Negatives subseries. This subseries also includes photographs that depict the work of other artists, particularly those who completed portraits of George Grey Barnard.

Arrangement: Folders in this subseries are arranged in chronological order by the creation date of the sculpture depicted. The creation date appears in parenthesis after the title of the work of art and is different from the dates that designate the presumed date of the photographic print. The chronological folders are followed by miscellaneous and unidentified works; works of art by other artists, and finally black and white transparencies and copy negatives.

Available Formats: This subseries has not been scanned.

Subseries 9.6: Glass Plate Negatives and Lantern Slides, circa 1900-1945

Scope and Contents:	This subseries consists of glass plate negatives and lantern slides of works of art and installation views of Barnard's second collection of medieval art known as the Abbaye. Plates of works of art are solely of Barnard's sculptures, including a large group photographed by Barnard Coolidge for a 1908 exhibition of Barnard's work at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. Prints of most of these plates can be found in the Works of Art subseries of photographs. The glass plates of the Abbaye are installation views of the medieval sculptures and architectural elements that constitute the collection. Prints of some of these plates can be found in the subseries of photographs titled Medieval Art and Collections. Lantern slides include images of works of art as well as Barnard in his studio and Barnard working on "Lincoln in Thought" with Ida Tarbell.
Arrangement:	Glass plate negatives and lantern slides are arranged by size.
Available Formats:	This subseries has not been scanned.
Box 12	Works of art, Barnard, and other subjects, circa 1905-1937 Notes: 48 lantern slides
Box 13	Works of art and the Abbaye collection, circa 1900-1945

Notes: 38 glass plate negatives (4"x5", 5"x7", 8"x10")
