Biographical / Historical

Tonalist landscape and marine painter, Henry Ward Ranger (1858-1916), became a full academicien of the National Academy of Design in 1906 and bequeathed his entire residuary estate to the academy. The investment of this substantial gift of nearly $400,000, known as the Ranger fund, would provide for the purchase of paintings by living American artists, which were distributed or accessioned by the Smithsonian Institution's then National Collection of Fine Arts.

Ranger was born in western New York State and attended Syracuse University for two years before opening a studio in New York City in the mid-1880s. He traveled to Europe and lived in the Netherlands for several years, where he was influenced by the Dutch watercolorists and the Barbizon masters. Ranger was known for his experiments with pigments and colors, his interiors of forests, and marine views of the shoreline in Connecticut, where he spent summers and helped to establish the artist colony in Old Lyme. He further divided his time between a country studio in Noank, Connecticut, his studio in the city, and trips to Puerto Rico and Jamaica in the winter months.

Following his death in 1916, Ranger's will was probated and involved in costly litigation for two years due to the presentation of another will asserting Ranger's sister, Edith, as the beneficiary. The second will was proven to be false and the Ranger fund went on to make a significant contribution to the Smithsonian's collection of American art, allowing the institution to ultimately claim sixty-six of the paintings purchased by the fund and amass a collection which represented popular academic tastes in American art over more than half a century.

Scope and Contents

The estate papers of New York tonalist painter Henry Ward Ranger, measure one linear foot and date from 1888-circa 1999, with the bulk of the material dating from 1904-1954. The collection primarily documents the settlement of Ranger's contested will and the administration of his estate, but also provides scattered biographical information on Ranger's life, provenance information about his work, and the significance of his estate gift to the National Academy of Design. Records include appraisal information including an estate ledger, correspondence and memoranda including two letters from Ranger, court documents, financial and real estate records, news clippings, and two photographs and six negatives of Ranger.

Series 1 documents the appraisal, administration, and distribution of Ranger's estate by the National Academy of Design. The bulk of the material comprises appraisal records, including an appraisal of Ranger's Noank studio by William Macbeth; correspondence and agreements with museums and other art institutions that received artwork purchased by the Ranger fund, including the Brooks Memorial Art Gallery, Des Moines Association of Fine Arts, Fine Arts Society of San Diego, Museum of Fine Arts , Houston, Oberlin College, and others; and financial records documenting assets and liabilities, including cancelled checks, receipts, investment and tax records, and records documenting real estate investments that contributed to the estate. Also found is a folder of personal papers, including two letters from Ranger, and a photograph and six negatives of Ranger, and a folder of nine letters from Ranger family members.

Series 2 primarily comprises court documents and legal counsel notes and correspondence related to the litigation of Ranger's will, and the process of proving the the legitimacy of Ranger's original will and the fraudulence of the will presented by Edith Ranger's lawyers.

Container Listing

Series 1: Henry Ward Ranger Estate, 1888-circa 1999

0.95 Linear feet (Boxes 1, 4)

This series documents the appraisal, administration, and distribution of Ranger's estate by the National Academy of Design to various galleries, museums, and other art institutions including Brooks Memorial Art Gallery, Des Moines Association of Fine Arts, Fine Arts Society of San Diego, Museum of Fine Arts, Houston, Oberlin College, and others. The bulk of the material comprises appraisal records, including an appraisal of Ranger's Noank studio conducted by William Macbeth, who was a co-executor of Ranger's estate with Charles Henry Phelps, prior to his death on August 10, 1917; an estate ledger listing all of the estate's contents including artwork by Ranger and others, and personal effects; correspondence and agreements with museums and other art institutions that received artwork purchased by the Ranger fund; and financial records documenting assets and liabilities, including cancelled checks, receipts, investment and tax records, and records documenting real estate investments that formed part of his estate.

One folder of Ranger personal papers includes a letter from Ranger to a judge with a transcript that was used during the litigation process to help prove the fraudulence of Edith Ranger's claims on the estate; one letter from attorney John B. Tuck to Ranger discussing the conveyance of Ranger's farm property in Fabius; and one letter to Ranger from Adolph G. shortly before Ranger's death. This folder also contains a one-page, handwritten family tree; a page of notes that could be Ranger's notes on his will; two of Ranger's business cards, and two of his studio invitation cards; an exhibition announcement of a Century Association loan exhibition (1916) with a list of Ranger's New York City addresses from 1881-1905; a magazine page showing a picture of Ranger at his easel in the outdoors; a photo postcard of Ranger; and six negatives of Ranger. There is one folder of Ranger family letters, including six letters from Edith Ranger to her sick father, two from Henry Ward Ranger's uncle; and one from Louise Ranger Whitmore.

Also found are legal documents recording claims against the estate and their settlement or rejection; news clippings about Ranger's bequest to the National Academy of Design; a catalog of a centennial memorial exhibition of Ranger's artwork in 1958; and a folder of correspondence and printed material which records the history of the Ranger fund up to 1993 with a copy of a curator's report on the fund's activity status.

Records are arranged by type and chronologically, where possible, thereafter.

A portion of this series has been digitized, including records which provide biographical information about Ranger and provenance information for his artwork, or document his estate gift to the National Academy of Design.

Records which have not been digitized include routine estate records not related to the purchase and distribution of artwork, including portions of the estate ledger.

Series 2: Settlement of Will, 1907-1920

1.05 Linear feet (Boxes 1-3)

This series documents the settlement of Ranger's will, which entered two years of litigation shortly after the artist's death, having been contested by Ranger's sister, Edith Ranger, whose lawyers presented a fraudulent will claiming her as an heir to Ranger's estate. The District Attorney papers include correspondence, memoranda, and legal documents related to the litigation. Court documents further record the legal proceedings. Of note are the court documents from 1916-1917 which include statements by various people who knew Ranger, some of whom were employed by him, as they provide limited biographical information about him and about his development as an artist. Also found are a photograph of Ranger, estimates of commissions due to William Macbeth from Ranger's estate, a copy of William Macbeth's will, and copies of Ranger's will and the fraudulent will.

Records are arranged by type.

A portion of this series has been digitized. Duplicates and records which relate primarily to the litigation of Ranger's will have not been digitized.
