Biographical / Historical

Washington Atlee Burpee (1858-1915) began a mail-order poultry and livestock business in 1876 in Philadelphia, which he soon expanded to include corn seed for chicken feed. In 1878, he founded W. Atlee Burpee & Co. to sell livestock and vegetable, fruit, and flower seeds through the mail. His company went on to become one of the most notable seed distributors in the world.

In 1888, W. Atlee bought a tract of land named Fordhook Farms in Doylestown, Pennsylvania. It was initially established as an experimental farm to test and evaluate new varieties of vegetables and flowers and to produce seeds for the mail-order market. Burpee spent many summers traveling throughout the United States and Europe visiting farms and searching for the best flowers and vegetables. Certain plants he found were shipped back to the firm for testing and propagation; other seeds were obtained through contracts with growers throughout the U.S., a practice common in the seed industry at that time. Promising varieties were bred with healthier specimens to produce hardier hybrids that were more resistant to disease. Other Burpee trial grounds were later established at Sunnybrook Farm near Swedesboro, New Jersey, and at Floradale Farms in Lompoc, California (1909/1910). The company went on to purchase more land for farming in California, and established sales branch headquarters in Sanford, Florida (circa 1930s), Clinton, Iowa (1942), and Riverside, California (1949).

W. Atlee Burpee married Blanche Simons (1863-1948) in 1892. They had three sons: David (1893-1980); W. Atlee Jr. ("Junior") (1894-1966); and Stuart Alexander (1901-1934). Both David and Junior attended the Blight School in Philadelphia for elementary school and Culver Military Academy in Culver, Indiana for preparatory school. While they both attended Cornell University as undergraduates, they left before graduating due to W. Atlee's poor health. Junior married Jeanetta Lee (1893-1981) in November, 1916, and they had two children: W. Atlee III (1917-1971) and Jeanette (1919-2002). David married Lois Torrance (1912-1984) in 1938, and they had two children: Johnathan (b. 1941) and Blanche (b. 1943). Stuart Alexander was apparently born with a disability; according to census records he worked on farms during his lifetime.

David Burpee took over the family business upon his father's death in 1915; W. Atlee Burpee, Jr. served as treasurer of the firm once he returned from serving in the military. At that time, the Burpee company had 300 employees and was the largest mail-order seed company in the world. It distributed over one million catalogs a year and received on average 10,000 orders a day. Under David's tutelage, the company adapted to contemporaneous shifts in business and advertising methods, advancements in plant science, ever-changing consumer demands, and two World Wars. In response to food shortages experienced during World War I, the Burpee company helped promote a "war gardens" campaign that evolved into a "victory gardens" campaign during World War II.

Both W. Atlee and David used their position as head of a major seed house to lobby congressional debates in regard to two topics: postage rates (W. Atlee) and the designation of a national floral emblem for the United States (David). Both men belonged to The Union League of Philadelphia and The Canadian Society of Philadelphia (which W. Atlee helped found), and served on the boards of directors for hospitals and other charitable organizations. Both father and son were politically aligned with the Republican Party.

The firm reorganized its governing structure in 1917 at which time it changed its name from W. Atlee Burpee & Co. to W. Atlee Burpee Co. Burpee's acquired three seed companies between 1878 and 1970: Luther Burbank Seed Company, James Vick's Seeds, Inc., and the William Henry Maule Company. David Burpee sold the company to the General Foods Corporation in 1970 and served as a consultant for the business until 1973. The Burpee brand was bought by its current owner, George J. Ball, Inc., in 1991.

Content Description

This collection documents W. Atlee Burpee & Co., a mail-order seed company based in Philadelphia, from its early beginnings in 1876 when its founder, W. Atlee Burpee, started in the agricultural business, to the 1970s when his son, David Burpee, sold the firm. The collection also includes personal papers of the Burpee family dating back to the mid-nineteenth century.

Business-related content in the collection consists of crop propagation and management records; company correspondence; administrative and personnel records; advertising files; legal papers; property records and plans; reports, studies, and technical data; notes and drafts; files on professional outreach activities and events; trade literature (published by both the Burpee company and a number of its competitors); and awards and certificates received by the company. Significant topics documented in these files include the development of notable flower and vegetable varieties introduced by the company; the impact of World Wars I and II on gardening and the global seed trade; advertising strategies, technology, and innovation; and David Burpee's advocacy of the marigold as the national floral emblem of the United States.

The Burpee family papers consist of personal files unrelated to the company's business operations. These include records generated by W. Atlee's father (David Burpee, 1827-1882) and grandfather (Washington L. Atlee, 1808-1878), as well as W. Atlee's wife, Blanche (1863-1948); David Burpee (1893-1980) and his wife, Lois (1912-1984); and W. Atlee Burpee II (1894-1966). There are genealogical surveys conducted on both the Atlee and Burpee families as well as clippings about family members. W. Atlee and David Burpee's series are the most extensive, and cover their involvement with numerous social and philanthropic clubs and organizations. The series include personal correspondence; financial, accounting, and tax records; travel-related files; reference material; and will and estate papers.

The Burpee collection also has a large number of images related to the Burpee business and family in a variety of formats including photographs, film and glass plate negatives, and advertisement mock-ups. Other formats include architectural and site plans, original artwork for advertisements, films, cassettes, audio tapes, and ephemera.

Arrangement

Collection is arranged into six series:

Series 1: Plant/Farm Related Material Series 2: Business Records Series 3: Material Published About the Burpee Company Series 4: Awards and Certificates Series 5: Photographic and A/V Materials Series 6: Burpee Family Papers

The collection's original order was maintained wherever possible, though many records were found scattered throughout the collection and artificial files were necessarily created for them.

Most files are arranged chronologically or alphabetically by person or topic.

Various photographs interspersed in correspondence files were kept where they were originally found. All other photographic and audio/visual materials found on their own were grouped in Series 5 Photographic and A/V Material which documents aspects of both the Burpee company and Burpee family.

General

The project to arrange and rehouse the W. Atlee Burpee & Co. Records received Federal support from the Smithsonian Collections Care and Preservation Fund, administered by the National Collections Program and the Smithsonian Collections Advisory Committee.

General

The project to digitize select Burpee records originating from Burpee Co.'s Sanford branch that had been affected by water damage and mold received Federal support from the Smithsonian Collections Care and Preservation Fund, administered by the National Collections Program and the Smithsonian Collections Advisory Committee.

Container Listing

Series 1: Plant/Farm Related Materials

Scope and Contents: Records related to the W. Atlee Burpee company's plant and farm operations. Records documents the company's technical advancements in plant science, the management of its crops, its early business of breeding and trading livestock, and the firm's non-seed products.

Subseries 1.1: Crops

Scope and Contents: Records related to the search for, development, and management of plants grown by the Burpee company.

Plants

Scope and Contents: Correspondence, plant-specific breeding objectives, novelty plant reports, crop progress and final reports, newspaper clippings, trade literature, photographs, memos, sales and pricing figures, and plant histories related to ornamental and edible plants grown by the Burpee company. The documents were generated mostly by company principals and staff, but material related to outside seed growers and scientists is also present. Also included are general reports from the various Burpee farms involved in seed trials and cultivation; plant descriptions; records related to novelty plant breeding, X-ray mutations, and hybridization; crop estimates; crop lists; and growing costs. Files are arranged generally by flowers and vegetables, followed by mixed crops.

Subseries 1.2: Livestock (Poultry, Pigs and Dogs)

Scope and Contents: Notebooks, correspondence, account records, notes, pedigree certificates, and lists related to the company's breeding and sale of livestock. Although a variety of livestock was bred during the company's early years, Scottish Collies were a mainstay of the firm's livestock program. Information regarding the lineage and sale of dogs is routinely represented in these records. The livestock program dwindled after the death of W. Atlee, though files indicate that the breeding of dogs continued into the 1960s.

Series 2: Business Records

Scope and Contents: The bulk of records range from 1875, when W. Atlee Burpee first went into the agricultural supply business, to the mid-1970s, a few years after David Burpee sold the company to General Foods Corporation. Included are correspondence; legal documents; illustrations; advertising mock-ups and proofs and advertisements; administrative and operational records; proofs and final copies of published materials; and personnel material. Because many of the records were generated at Fordhook Farms, which served as both the company's trial grounds and home of the Burpee family, some personal papers are interspersed in the business records.

Subseries 2.1: Office Files

Scope and Contents: Letters from the company to customers, seed companies, and other businesses and persons; financial and accounting records; sales and contracts; and miscellaneous files outlining the history of the Burpee company.

Company Correspondence

Scope and Contents: Correspondence sent on behalf of the W. Atlee Burpee Co. The bulk of this material was authored by W. Atlee Burpee or high-level staff members. Most of the files were originally housed chronologically and/or alphabetically in cardboard transfer cases labeled "W. A. Burpee Correspondence," and included both original and carbon copies of receipts, contracts, order inquiries, trade literature, general correspondence, notebooks, and photographs. Correspondents include customers from all over the world, contractors, seed companies, Burpee staff, high-ranking government officials and other "notables," and various outside organizations.

After the 'transfer case' phase of file management (ca. 1890-1920), the firm's record keeping system transitioned to one where topical files were created for individual subjects, individuals, etc. For additional company correspondence and other files related to the running of the company, see W. Atlee and David Burpee's personnel papers in Series 2.2 Administrative Records/Personnel.

Seed Companies

Scope and Contents: Correspondence and files related to domestic and foreign seed companies, many of which sold seed stock to the Burpee company. Found in this subseries are technical and business correspondence, company histories, clippings, trade literature, travel itineraries, seed packets, notes, financial reports, and legal documents. Also included is correspondence related to surplus seed offers, lists of seed companies, and notebooks that detail price comparisons.

For the bulk of agricultural trade literature from seed companies other than Burpee, see Series 2.9 Burpee Library and Reference Materials.

Promotions and Publicity

Scope and Contents: Files related to the company's many efforts to promote its seeds, a particular plant, product, or itself. Records include clippings, press releases, trade literature, correspondence, and postcards. Found in this subseries are papers related to the Yankee Clipper, the first cross-Atlantic commercial mail flight; television program and radio broadcast files; reports and correspondence from public relation consulting agencies; and numerous clippings about Burpee plant novelties. Also included are files documenting instances when the company sent marigolds, promoted as the "friendship flower," to foreign countries.

Customer Testimonials and Contests

Scope and Contents: A major component of W. Atlee Burpee's business philosophy was creating a product the consumer could trust. One method of instilling this trust was highlighting customer testimonials and contests in the company's trade literature. This subseries contains customer correspondence (handwritten letters, transcriptions, and excerpts), postcards, clippings, and photographs.

Also found in this series are files related to Burpee's White Marigold competition which began in 1954 and lasted until 1975. For this contest, contestants were asked to submit seeds for a truly white marigold. The company offered prizes for nearest-to-white marigolds for two decades, but it was not until 1975 that the $10,000 prize was awarded to Alice Vonk of Iowa. This was by far the company's most extensive—and expensive— promotional project. The records include correspondence and memos sent between the company, hired judges, and customers; press releases; magazine and newspaper clippings; technical correspondence regarding White Marigold trials; and photographs.

Notes: In 1915, Successful Farming magazine announced a letter-writing contest asking the public to answer the question, 'Which seed, tree, or plant advertisement in the March issue of Successful Farming contains the best offer and the most valuable information?' This file is comprised of letters written in support of W. Atlee Burpee & Co.'s advertisement.

Subseries 2.4: Legal Matters

Scope and Contents: Correspondence, legal documents, patent and trademark applications, plans, legislative acts, land agreements, and papers from Burpee's legal counsel. Notable topics include W. Atlee Burpee's original partnership with Gustavus S. Benson (1876 to 1878); the controversy and lawsuit surrounding Henry A. Dreer's Bush Lima; land and zoning issues between the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the Burpee Co.; and the acquisition of rights to Luther Burbank's property—both intellectual and real.

W. Atlee Burpee and David Burpee each used one legal office for their business and personal matters: Herman Yerkes served as W. Atlee's legal advisor, while the Philadelphia firm of Morgan, Lewis and Bockius served in that capacity for David. Especially for David, pockets of personal- and business-related legal documents are found in his personnel files and family papers.

Subseries 2.5: Burpee Properties and Real Estate

Scope and Contents: Land agreements, correspondence, contracts, reports and plans generated by consulting companies, employee lists, clippings, photographs, and memos related to the firm's various branches and properties. The records primarily document physical and logistical aspects of the properties, but administrative, sale, and seed production information are also found in some of the files. For records directly related to the growing of seeds at various Burpee farms, see Series 1 Plant/Farm Related Material.

Pennsylvania

Biographical / Historical: The company's first office building was located at 223 Church Street in Philadelphia. It relocated to 475-477 North Fifth Street in 1883. In 1888, W. Atlee Burpee purchased the original acreage of what would ultimately be named "Fordhook Farms" in Doylestown, Bucks County, Pennsylvania, 25 miles north of Philadelphia. The company added warehouse space to its Philadelphia operations in 1898. In 1936, the company moved its headquarters to Hunting Park Avenue and Eighteenth Street in Philadelphia.

Established in 1888 as the company's seed trial grounds, Fordhook Farms included a number of outbuildings as well as the family home of W. Atlee and Blanche Burpee, later the home of David and Lois Burpee. The home later served for a time as a bed and breakfast under the name The Inn at Fordhook Farm.

Scope and Contents: Correspondence, reports, property appraisals, photographs, plans and building specifications, clippings, property inventories, and legal documents pertaining to Burpee company sites in Pennsylvania.

California

Biographical / Historical: The company first acquired land in California for the purpose of growing sweet peas in a consistent and temperate environment—rather than the more seasonal and less predictive climate of Pennsylvania—in 1909/1910. The original property, named "Floradale" by the property's first manager, Edwin Lonsdale, was located 160 miles north of Los Angeles in Lompoc, California. In 1944, the Burpee Co. acquired an additional property—also for the purpose of growing warm-weather plants—approximately 90 miles south of Floradale Farms in Santa Paula. The company often referred to its entire California operation as Floradale. A West Coast sales branch was established in Riverside, California in 1949.

Scope and Contents: Reports, general administrative and technical correspondence, property lease statements, progress and final reports, clippings, memos, and notes.

Florida

Biographical / Historical: The Burpee firm established a sales branch in Sanford, Florida, (sometime in the 1930s?) dedicated to its foreign (and possibly wholesale) business sales. According to a Nomination Form submitted to the National Register of Historic Places Inventory for the Sanford Commercial District in 1976, the property was still owned by the Burpee Co. at that time.

Scope and Contents: Files include general and accounting correspondence and financial statements.

Restrictions: Files from the Sanford office were subjected to water damage at some point and require preservation photocopying. Select files are not accessible for research use at the present time.

Subseries 2.6: Burpee Subsidiaries and Realty Companies

Biographical / Historical: The Burpee Co. involved itself with the acquisition of three seed companies between 1878 and 1970 when it was sold to General Foods Corporation: William Henry Maule Company, James Vick's Seeds, Inc., and the Luther Burbank Seed Company.

It also established the Tabor Realty Company, a means used by David Burpee to consolidate personal and company properties under a single realty company.

Scope and Contents: This series includes files related to seed companies acquired by the Burpee firm as well two realty companies proposed/established by the Burpee Co. Included are correspondence, financial statements and reports, inventories, notes, legal documents, photographs, board meeting minutes and trade literature.

While the majority of Burpee subsidiaries' files are found in this series, additional records are scattered throughout the collection, particularly in Series 2.1 Business Records/Office Files/Financial and Accounting and Series 2.3 Business Records/Advertising.

Luther Burbank Seed Co.

Biographical / Historical: Upon the death of Luther Burbank (1849-1926)—an esteemed horticulturalist and plant scientist, as well as a Burpee relative—the rights to his experiments and business property were initially purchased by Stark Brothers Nurseries of Louisiana, Missouri. Stark subsequently sold limited rights to Burbank's business and name to the Burpee company, including the "Luther Burbank Treasure Chest" acquired by the Burpee firm in 1931.

William Henry Maule Co.

Biographical / Historical: William Henry Maule was a lifelong friend and early business partner of W. Atlee Burpee. He became involved with Benson, Burpee & Co. in 1877 and then continued his partnership with Benson (Benson, Maule & Co.) until embarking on a business under his own name in 1885. The Burpee firm purchased the assets of Maule's in 1926, and then incorporated it in 1927. In 1947, Burpee's officially merged with the William Henry Maule Company.

Subseries 2.8: Materials Published by the Burpee Co.

Scope and Contents: Printed matter published by the Burpee Co. for its customers including seed catalogs, notices, special offer lists, order forms, and instructional materials.

Burpee Catalogs

Scope and Contents: Included are copies of the company's annual catalog, Red and Blue Lists (wholesale and market-gardener catalogs, respectively), supplemental and seasonal catalogs, and catalog mailing envelopes. This series does not contain a complete run of all Burpee seed catalogs.

Bound copies of the Burpee catalog were often stamped with the name of a Burpee principal like David Burpee and interleaved with blank pages for notetaking. (Bound copies in this series do not include any annotations.) Some of the bound copies include a copy of the annual catalog as well as all of the supplemental and seasonal catalogs that were issued in a particular year.

Biographical / Historical: From 1879 to 1909 the title of the Burpee catalog was Burpee's Farm Annual. The name was changed for one year to Burpee's New Annual, and then to Burpee's Annual until 1929. (Burpee staff often used the abbreviation "B.A." to refer to the Burpee Annual in the company files.) In the early 1930s the catalog was titled Burpee's Garden Book, and then in 1935 changed to Burpee Seeds. In the late 1960s the title was changed to Burpee Seeds and Everything for the Garden.

Series 3: Materials Published About the Burpee Co.

Scope and Contents: Records related to books and articles written by outside authors—published or not—that showcase or briefly mention the W. Atlee Burpee Company. While most of the material relates to articles or clippings from specific publications, Series 3.2 Articles/Garden Writers includes correspondence that pertains to the company's relations with a variety of garden writers.

Subseries 3.1: Books

Scope and Contents: This series includes correspondence between the Burpee firm, publishing companies, and authors; and extensive research material on the history of the Burpee Co. compiled for proposed books by Warner Olivier and Irving Townsend (not written) and Garden to Order: The Story of Mr. Burpee's Seeds and How They Grow by Ken Kraft (published in 1962). The research material includes original and copied correspondence, photographs, clippings, reports, notes, advertisements and proofs, plant descriptions, Burpee trade literature, maxims authored by W. Atlee and David Burpee, legislative proceedings that affected the company, and reports compiled by company staff.

Biographical / Historical: In wake of a series of Saturday Evening Post articles by Frank J. Taylor in the late 1930s, David Burpee was in contact with a number of publishing companies to discuss the writing of a book about the Burpee company. The files in this series document Burpee book projects between 1938 and 1976; only one, Garden to Order: The Story of Mr. Burpee's Seeds and How They Grow written by Ken Kraft in 1962, was carried through to publication.

Series 5: Photographic and A/V Material

Scope and Contents: Photographic images and audiovisual material that document the farm and business operations of the Burpee Co., its many promotional efforts, and members of the Burpee family. Numerous other photographs found scattered throughout the collection have been retained in their original file except in rare instances when images have been removed from a file for preservation purposes.

For image files related to advertising mock-ups, see Series 2.3 Ad Copy, Graphics, Mock-ups, and Proofs.

Subseries 5.1: Images

Scope and Contents: Image formats range from glass plate negatives, film negatives, and transparencies to photographs and 35mm slides.

Farm Operations

Scope and Contents: Images that document Burpee farm operations such as trial grounds, personnel working in the field, plant portraits, buildings and structures, and livestock. Numerous staged images show David Burpee inspecting the Burpee trial gardens in California. Included in this subseries are images of the Burpee family home at Fordhook Farms.

Box 416, Folder 51	Wartime Workers Quarters at Fordhook Farms, 1943 August 24 1 File Photographer: Wide World Photos, Inc Notes: During World War II, the workforce in the United States experienced labor shortages due to the millions of men serving in the military at the time, leaving many companies to rely on women to fill a variety of positions. In 1943, David Burpee, of W. Atlee Burpee and Company, assembled a group of female horticultural students from Cornell University, New Jersey Agricultural College, and other schools to maintain the company's Fordhook Farms, cultivate plants, and harvest seeds. Burpee renovated an old farmhouse into a dormitory for the women to reside in during their time working for the Burpee Farm. These images document the leisure activities the women engaged in after the workday ended, such as reading, writing letters, playing the piano, swimming, playing badminton, and eating together. This series of photographs was taken by the Philadelphia bureau of Wide World Photos, Inc., a news reporting service that provided content to newspapers and magazines. They were accompanied by a list of lengthy captions supplied by World Wide Photos that was likely intended for newspaper copy. The Burpee collection at AAG includes only some of images in the World Wide Photos series of women working at Fordhook Farms.
