In the sequence of Louise Newton's slide presentation this image comes after those for Esher Place and before those for Penshurst Place. Several other gardens, however, were visited between the visits to Esher Place and Penshurst Place. These included, in order: Wisley, Albury Park, Burford, Brockhurst, and The Homestall. Moreover, the slide presentation placed the Penshurst images before those for Brockhurst, adding further uncertainty to the location of this image.

A complete copy of the GCA tour itinerary was printed in the Bulletin of the Garden Club of America (Fourth Series, No. 5), September 1929, pp. 6-25. Cliveden has not been absolutely confirmed as the location of this image. However, in Louise Newton's slide show this image is sequenced in the middle of other Cliveden images and the quality of the light is similar as well. In addition, the four poplar trees in the upper right of the image bear a striking similarity to the four poplars seen in image ENG120036, but shot from a different angle.

However, in Louise Newton's slide show this image is sequenced at the end of other Cliveden images and before images of another garden, Abbotswood, which was visited the following day. Since the first Abbotswood images show the house and adjacent gardens it seems logical that the Cliveden series would conclude with an image relating to the one immediately preceding, of the water garden, ENG120041.
