Administrative Information

Immediate Source of Acquisition Note

John Hiller, an employee in the Smithsonian's Office of Exhibits Central, donated the collection to the Archives of American Gardens in 2005. The collection had been on deposit in the Archives for a few years prior to it being formally donated.

Provenance

John Hiller, an employee in the Smithsonian's Office of Exhibits Central, acquired the collection from John Wellemeyer sometime in the 1990s. According to Hiller, Wellemeyer was involved with filmmaking and purchased the box of autochromes at a yard sale, possibly in Alexandria, Virginia.

Scope and Contents Note

The John Hiller Collection contains 216 glass autochromes dated c. 1910-1920. The images cover a wide array of subjects and regions, with many of them showing landscapes and travel destinations. Some show house interiors, flower arrangements, or casual groups of people. Several of the autochromes show historic towns and ruins in Greece and Switzerland along with some in Croatia, Italy, Bulgaria and Austria. Scattered amongst these are slides of various unidentified sites and gardens. It is not known if any of the unidentified images show sites in the United States.

The photographer(s) of these images is unknown. The uniformity of the type of tape used to seal each of the autochromes suggests that the images are likely the work of one photographer or photo studio rather than a collection compiled by an individual from multiple sources.

Physical Characteristics and Technical Requirements

While most of the lantern slides are autochromes, there is a possibility that some are dioptichromes.

The autochromes in the John Hiller Collection were originally housed in a wooden box divided into ten sections. A sheet of typewritten numbered image captions was pasted to the inside of the hinged box lid. Many of the autochromes bear a hand-written alphanumeric code on their border (e.g. A-17, D-11, etc.) that is keyed to a specific caption. A few images have a small sticker with a hand-written number affixed to them. The sheet of image captions lists four broad subject categories at the top: House & Garden, Copies, Experimental, and Portraits. Below these are listed individual captions for (87) European sites. While the subject categories are written in English, some of the captions feature foreign words (Suisse for Switzerland, Wien for Vienna, etc.)

The autochromes were found in no discernible order and did not follow the order of the numbered captions.

Bulgaria

Box 2                    HLR058: Bulgaria: men in front of building, circa 1910-1935
 1 Autochromes (photographs)
 Notes:                Although it was not possible to determine the meaning of the eight letters above the door on the left, the smaller lettering on the left can be interpreted as "station head." The smaller lettering on the right can be interpreted as "on duty official." That this was some sort of government building is further confirmed by the uniformed men in the image.

 1 Autochromes (photographs)
 Notes:                The word "Captal" was on the original slide label. There does not appear to be any town by that name in Croatia, not is this an image of either Dubrovnik or Zagreb, cities that might be considered "capital" cities of the country. The landscape, however, is that which is found in the area around Dubrovnik and south.

Box 4 HLR173: Photograph of "Waterfall," by Maxfield Parrish, circa 1930-1935

1 Autochromes (photographs)

Notes: This is a photograph of part of Maxfield Parrish's 1930 painting titled "Waterfall." The central portion of the painting was reproduced on the 1931 Edison Mazda calendar. HLR173 shows a further cropping of this calendar image, its likely source. These firm dates also serve as an indication of the dates of the Hiller Collection as a whole.
