Biographical / Historical

Marie Satenik Nahikian was a co-founder and the first Executive Director of the Adams Morgan Organization (AMO, founded in 1972). Before Washington, DC had Home Rule, AMO put into practice a local, elected self-governance structure that advocated for issues of concern to residents of the Adams Morgan neighborhood. AMO served as the main model for the Advisory Neighborhood Commissions that were created when Home Rule was implemented in Washington, DC. Marie S. Nahikian, particularly through her work with AMO, was a staunch advocate and partial architect of three landmark pieces of tenant rights and anti-displacement legislation in DC: the 1975 Rental Accommodations Act, the 1978 Residential Real Property Transfer Excise Tax, and the 1980 Rental Housing Conversion and Sale Act.

Nahikian was elected Advisory Neighborhood Commissioner for ANC-1C (in Adams Morgan) and twice ran for D.C. City Council (unsuccessfully). She was appointed by Mayor Walter Washington (1915-2003) to serve two terms as a Tenant Commissioner on the D.C. Rental Accommodations Commission. She later served under Mayor Marion

Barry (1936-2014) as head of the Tenant Purchase Program that enabled largely low- and moderate-income tenants to purchase and become cooperative owners of their buildings.

After leaving Washington, DC, she went on to work for Mayors in Philadelphia and New York City. Nahikian also worked in the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development under President Barack Obama.

In 2023, Marie Satenik Nahikian hosts the Usable Past podcast, where activists share their stories of past and present organizing to create better lives for as many people as possible.

Nahikian which document her life in the Adams Morgan neighborhood of Washington, D.C., as well as her writing and her work as an editor for Harper's Weekly. Marie Satenik Nahikian was born on October 24, 1946, in Asheville, NC to Robert and Irma Nahikian. Nahikian attended the Women's College of North Carolina (now known as University of North Carolina at Greensboro) from 1964-1969, where she was first involved in community organizing. She moved to Washington D.C. in the fall of 1969 and began working for the United States Student Press Association. In 1972, Nahikian co-founded and became the first Executive Director of the Adams Morgan Organization. For the next several years, she dedicated herself to community organizing in her neighborhood and across Washington D.C., with the goal of bettering tenants' rights and fighting "land speculation." She moved out of Washington D.C. in 1985.
