Roosevelt African Expedition (1909)
English.
Printed caption on recto reads: "Gaboon Puff Adder."
Printed caption on verso reads: "Gaboon Puff Adder. The Gaboon Puff Adder takes its name from the river Gabun, a tributary of the Congo. Ex-president Roosevelt and party expect to spend considerable time in the regions where these snakes abound. The Puff Adder hisses with a puffing sound. It has an unusually broad triangular head, due to the excessive size of its poison sacs. Its bite is very deadly, being perhaps the most quickly fatal of any serpent known, and it is very ugly in appearance. It attains a length of four or five feet, and is often as thick as a man's arm. In color it is yellowish brown checkered with reddish brown and white."

Freeman, Thomas Birch, 1809-1890
English.
Postcard illustration of a Thomas B. Freeman before the Court of the King of Ashanti in 1839. Accompanying text on reverse reads: "'In January, 1839, Freeman made a journey to Kumassi...After a tedious march...he reached his goal and was received by the king in barbaric state. The Court, on rising, defiled past its guest in a procession lasting a full hour-and-a-half. For some days the visitor was confined to his apartments, as his Majesty 'was aware that Europeans did not like to see human sacrifices'! All day long the muffled death-drums beat, and Freeman watched from the courtyard of his lodging the vultures wheeling over the city of blood.'"

Printed caption on verso reads: "In Kenya's Rift Valley, an attentive audience watches two Maasai elders playing mbao. Mbao, the swahili word for 'board,' is the East African version of a game played throughout Africa. Two opposing players or teams move their counters around a twelve to thirty-two hole board, trying to capture their opponent's 'men.' It is a fast moving game in which skill and strategy, not luck, determine the winner. / Rift Valley, Kenya, 1966."

Since I could not read your address I am sending this postcard through Alfred. Write to me at greater length, tell me about your present life. Have you renounced your vagabond life across France probably not since your nature always in search of the new is not yet blasé about all the beauty that France contains. As to me my life has hardly changed but it is possible that in more or less distant future I might make a very interesting trip."
You know...that captain Bibault and Vilot left for Tonkin. Someone said "to see Naples and die" but he could have said "see the... and die" it is supposed to be a magnificent land but since I have at this time a fairly good position I shall not leave without being assured of a position elsewhere. There is therefore nothing as yet decided as to my leaving Madagascar. Am I there for long? Could be in fact that I return next year. Good health."

Original hand-written text on verso, "My dear Jeanne. How are you doing? We make do with watching the rain fall, it has been like this for 5 weeks. They changed the weather of our South. The... no longer gets out or makes any noise, takes his umbrella, he is quite capable of loosing his (southern sunny) accent.
In any case, the admiral takes his command post on the 5th and by the 10th or 15th off with galley to distant parts... I am going to get bored like a poisoned rat I will I believe do some escapade in Marseille and hope that Louis will come join me and buck up his Pierrot's face. My kids are behaving and Andrée studies well. I do like them send you kisses with all my heart."

you both in good health. Through Maman I quite often have your news. She must have told you that I have quite a lot of jobs, while the conveniences are missing. Finally our stay is getting shorter and God wishes we will be able to leave in 31 and offer you our wishes personally. In wishing you good health, receive dear cousins with friendship of Klebec affectionate caresses from both of

G. M. L.
French.
Original caption reads, "East Coast of Madagascar "Tsikofura" - Sacrifice of an Ox on the occasion of the Deceased."

Original hand-written text on recto, "22/ 9/ 09. My dear... I did receive your long and friendly letter which as usual was most welcome. In my voluntary exile in the middle of the Malagasy Bush far from the city noise and any civilization (which is not necessarily to be regretted) I feel a bit lonely at times - Life there is without constraints, undoubtedly. This great liberty, so much sought after, is not to be sniffed at but one tries of everything even of comforts because I have never been happier. I find that life is monotonous and empty which well proves that one is never truly happy me wishes always something. At this time I wish I had my bicycle to be able to make long rides but here is the catch : the bicycle might still be easy to procure but as to roads there are none. I speak about the area where i live because certain important centres of Madagascar, Tananarive, Tamatave, Majunga, etc. are better off and already have some stretches of road. I am mailing this postcard to your office. You probably have resumed going there a long time ago. I wish you well for your long walks, so interesting. I hope that you had the good thought of keeping a diary of your travels, noting regularly your impressions of the day. With the writing skills I know you to have, and the travels that you make that would not fail to be interesting. Good health, my dear..., many good things from me to your family. Accept my friendship at the same time as a cordial handshake.

remember me to your mami. I just learned that René joined Tussèri; in my opinion he is ending up where he should have begun since he is much more suited for attorney dom than for industry - when I return I am certain to find my old friend wedded and heading a law firm. Here life remains unchanged. We get the pencils sharpened expertly by little eight or ten year olds and I assure you that it is worth all the women on earth. Nevertheless I would gladly visit with Aline or Therèse or elsewhere! All the best to you and three cheers for beastly love."

You will find the chapter a little thin but what can I say, the wealth of material is lacking and it is rather the opportunity of a meuling which entices me to draw a few lines and chatter a little bit with you all. Health remains excellent but what ... many sick, we however, always staying firmly at our past; there are frankly the only details that I can give you. The "Chilli" leaves tomorrow for France and she won't dawdle on the way since she carries the governor general and all his hike. The day before yesterday we thought - we would get mail from you and the "Galliën" but nothing from our dear Neuilly, however St. Alphonse favoured us you are planning to take some leave in June, we are told, Rose and Pierre and October for Louise and her Pierre. By the way, Pierre T. when are the exams? We wish you good luck in advance. As to Paul, it still is for April 19. And our granny what is she doing? and this dear "Jean Toy"... Rose, you know we still be thinking about you on April 11. You surely prefer to see the "Piece" as it is now than to have to sprit out, right? And Jeanette when is it due? Those who are coming back from leave say that life is increasingly difficult in France. Is it true?"
Prices are going up too? Good health to you all. Good kisses from ours to Paul and Suzie. Thousand for you from Tonron and Tara.

Original hand-written address on verso, "Mademoiselle Barthès. 14 Rue de la Praternité Auxerre Youne."

Original hand-written text on recto, "Camp d'Ambre, 9 May 1920. I shall overlook the harshness of the coloring: typical of a Malagasy editor! But the poor church dress not proclaim the wealth of the colony! A cathedral was started in the vicinity - in the stone - but funds are often running out the camp's chapel has more character even though it is yet again built in wood. We attend mass there every wednesday and the first Sunday of the month. What strength I have found there in my bad days. The sight of the nuns fends off for a while the boredom of the exile: yet one of them is of the deepest black, another only lightly coloured, the third, the mother superior is white, a creole from Mauritius."

Je suis bien ennué de ce qu'Edouard a fait. Je ne sais vraiment a quel age il commencera a devenir sérieux. Quel dommage que je ne sois en France; je me chargerai de le faire revenir a de meilleurs sentiments. Les fetes de Noel se sont passées assez tristement étant donne surtout de cette chaleur accablante. Tu trouves, chère soeur, que la barbe me rend serieux. Tu ne te trompes pas car j'ai bien changé comme caractère ici, puis sais tu que je cours sur mes 22 ans. Quant ces cartes tu as du recevoir un panorama de Dakar et une autre fantaisie."

Translated handwritten text on verso reads, "Dear Henriette, thank you for these two pretty and kind postcards which I received with a letter of uncle Louis. I feel sorry for Edourd's actions. I have no idea when he will show more maturity. I wish I could be in France to having him become more positive. Christmas was sad due to an excess of heat. You believe, dear sister, that I looked more serious wearing a beard. You are right, I have grown up but you should know that I am almost 22 year-old. Je crois que réellement j'ai chipée la bonne place. Je préfère aller dans la brousse surtout au Cameroun où tout est tranquille en ce moment. Dakar n'a rien d'intéressant. D'autre part tout y est très cher et tout le monde ... la brousse. Les femmes ont toute ou presque la vérole que ce soit blanches ou noires. Vivement que je sois dans un poste tranquille avec ma section. Je ne m'en ferai pas des banquiers, une petite et jeune m... qui m'allumera le porte plume de temps à autre et la nous tiendrons. Bonjour aux copains de ma part. J'écris à Mr. Oriipeau et à Jane. Sincère et cordiale poignée de main."

My dear Marcel, I arrived on the 26th at Dakar but waited to be settled in to write to you, the journey was obstructed we are at a post 7 kilometers away from Dakar where we are awaiting our departure for Cameroon. the 40th has been dissolved, the 4th who leave for Zinder, the 2nd went over to the 4th Senegalese and the 1st and 3rd, mine, leaves without fear for Cameroon. I believe I really caught the right place. I prefer above all to go to the bush in Cameroon where everything is peaceful right now. Dakar has nothing interesting and besides that everything here is expensive and everyone is asking for the bush. The women all or almost all have the pox whether they are white or black. I wish I were in a quiet post with my section. I wouldn't worry, books and a small young deck boy to lay out my peholder from time to time and we'll hold on. Hello to the friends from me, I am writing to Mr. Orivean and to Jane. Sincere and cordial handshake."

Additional handwritten text on verso reads, "Tombouctou, ce 28 Janvier 1919. J'aurais voulu t'envoyer une carte représentant des Touareg ou des Songhrai, c'est-à-dire des indigènes de la région de Tombouctou. Mais il n'y en a pas. Cette famille qui ouvre de si grand yeux devant l'appareil est probablement du Haut-Sénégal. Tombouctou est une vraie petite ville, au milieu de dunes de sable ou il n'y a presque pas de végétation. Un canal qui vient d'être achevé, la relie au Niger et j'ai pu y arriver avec ma chaloupe à vapeur "l'Ibis" ou "Gouverneur Clozet". Le vent qui souffle ici, froid en ce moment, vient du Nord... c'est peut-être un peu de vent de France. Je t'embrasse."

Translated handwritten text on verso reads, "Tombouctou January 28, 1919. I would have liked to send you a card representing the Touareg or the Songhai, that is to say natives of the region of tombouctou but there weren't any. This family that opens such serious eyes before the camera is probably from Upper Senegal. Tombouctou is a truly small city in the middle of sand dunes where there is almost no vegetation. A canal that was just completed connects it to the Niger and I was able to get there with my steam launch, "the Ibis" or "Governor clozet". The wind that blows here, cold just now comes from the North... maybe it's a little wind from France. Love."

Je suis allé à un mariage. J'ai dansé une fois avec Mme Flinon. Le monde chic va jouer une pièce de l'Odéon sous la direction de Bauer, les dancer du monde vont, paraît-il jouer et, paraît-il, j'aurai le principal rôle. C'est une pièce de l'Odéon: La vie de Bohême. Bauer m'a demandé si je ferai le sacrifice de mes moustaches, ce à quoi j'ai répondu oui, et puis ça repousse, les siennes sont magnifiques, des détails demain. Recu colis très bien arrivé. On en mange encore, merci. Vous êtes des petits anges, merci. 2 janvier 1919."

Health is necessary for 1912, there is a group that is returning to Paris, the Flinons, the Sorets, Lebrue, Paulien, etc. The mother Flinon wants to have fun and at last to stick you with her monster from time to time (to watch him) but I made her understand that I monopolize your authority, there!... I went to a wedding, I danced once with Mrs. Flinon. The chic world is putting on a play from the Odeon under Bauer's direction, dancers of the world are going, it seems to play and, it seems I will have the principal role. It's an Odeon play 'The Bohemian Life' Bauer asked me if I would make the sacrifice of my mustaches to which I responded Yes and besides they grow back, his are magnificent, details tomorrow. Additional handwritten text on verso reads, "Rufisque le 18 février 1919. Ma très aimée, Je crois que j'ai des chances pour partir dans les tout premiers jours du prochain mois. Mon travail sera fini d'ici quelques jours et comme le Garouna est attendu a Dakar vers le 2 ou le 3 mars, il est probable que je partirai avec lui à condition toutefois qu'il y ait de la place a bord. Ici pas grand chose de nouveau. Il fait toujours très chaud mais très sec ce qui n'est pas désagréable. Ce qui le sera moins le mois prochain c'est d'être obligé de s'emmitouffler jusqu'aux oreilles mais c'est vrai que j'aurai d'autres compensations qui feront paraître la transition moins horrible."

Translated handwritten text on verso reads, "Rufisque February 18, 1919. My dear beloved, I believe that I have opportunities for leaving in the very first days of next month. My work will be finished a few days from now and as the Garouna is expected in Dakar towards the 2nd or the 3rd of March it is probable that I will leave with it on the condition however that there is room on board. Nothing much new here and it is always very hot and very dry, which is not uncomfortable. What will be less next month is to be forced to bundle up to one's ears but it is true that I will have other concessions, which would make the transition less horrible."

1 Postcard (letterpress halftone.; color; 9 x 16 cm.)

Postcard of six Africans posing by a Singer sewing machine. Caption on verso reads: "Zululand. This is a fertile, well-watered country of South Africa, on the Indian Ocean, and forms a part of the region known as Kaffraria. The native Zulus are a fine warlike people of the Bantu stock, speaking the Bantu language. This language extends over more than half of Africa and is one of great beauty and flexibility. The Zulu bids fair to be as forward in civilization as he has been in war. Our group represents the Zulus after less than a century of civilization. Worth wins everywhere. Our agent at Cape Town supplies both European and Native inhabitants of Zululand, the Transvaal, and Free Orange State with thousands of Singer Machines. The Singer Manufacturing Co."

EEPA RH-07-20: Great Zimbabwe Ruins Detail of outer wall, 1992
1 Postcard (col.; 13.5 x 17 cm.)
Andrea Robbins & Max Becher

Original caption reads, "Great Zimbabwe Ruins, detail of outer wall. - These ruins, from which the country took its name at the time of independence in 1981, were built by an empire that flourished around 1400 a.d. The ruins are ample evidence of a kind required by the traditional European historian to deem a culture "advanced" or "civilized" (cut stone, complex, mortar-free dwellings to house a far-reaching empire over centuries). However, since their very existence contradicts the particular stereotypes that were used to justify colonialism, willing historians sought to find architects of the ruins other than the local Shona population (Phoenicians, for example), thus challenging the structures' significance as indigenous cultural monuments. Until very recently, their origins were referred to as "mysterious" or "controversial" by some. However, incontrovertible scientific evidence that has been accumulated since the turn of the century places the ruins directly in the historic continuum of the region and its people and is symbolic vindication for the majority population of Zimbabwe as well as for greater Africa."
