Biographical Note

Photographer Constance Stuart Larrabee (1914-2000) was best known for her images taken in South Africa. Born in Cornwall, England, she was raised in Pretoria. She studied photography in London (1933-1935) and at the Bavarian State Institute for Photography in Munich (1935-1936), where she was influenced by the avant-garde work of artists at the Bauhaus. Returning to South Africa, Larrabee set up a studio and photographed many leading cultural and political figures of the period. During World War II she served as South Africa's first woman war correspondent, and in 1950 she married American Sterling Larrabee and moved to the United States.

Larrabee began photographing the peoples of South Africa in the late 1930s. She published extensively, including a portfolio produced for the book Cry, the Beloved Country, by Alan Paton (New York: C. Scribner's Sons, 1948). Her work has appeared in exhibits throughout the world, including the following: The Lovedu in Pretoria, 1947; The Family of Man (Museum of Modern Art, 1955); Tribal Photographs (Corcoran Art Gallery, 1984; and Go Well, My Child (National Museum of African Art, Smithsonian Institution, 1986).

Scope and Contents

The collection dates from 1900 to 1997 and mostly includes images taken in South Africa. The images document the peoples of South Africa, particularly the Lovedu, Ndebele, San, Sotho, Xhosa, and Zulu peoples. Locations photographed include Basutoland (now Lesotho), Bechuanaland (now Botswana), Johannesburg, Natal, Pretoria, Soweto, Swaziland, Transkei, Transvaal, the Umzimkulu Valley and Zululand.

Notable people photographed include Noel Coward, Gwen Ffangcon Davies, Athol Fugard, Nadine Gordimer, Norman Hackforth, Freida Lock, Ivor Novello, Alan Paton, Alexis Preller, Gerard Sekoto, and Marda Vanne.

The manuscript materials and office files are comprised of clippings, correspondence, exhibition announcements, invitations and reviews, notes, essays, receipts, and other manuscript materials that document Larrabee's career, family history, and personal life.

Between 1936 and 1949, Constance Stuart devoted much of her spare time to photographing the Ndebele, who lived in settlements near Pretoria. During the week, Stuart operated her studio in town; on weekends she drove to the nearby settlements. She frequently returned to the same places, and became familiar with many Ndebele women. Stuart created portraits, recorded Ndebele architecture, and documented activities, among them wall painting and mat making.

Notes: Sotho Cattle Herders, 1941. Photographic image of two men. One is sitting on one of the cattle. The other man is on horseback. Their herd of cattle is nearby. There is a field of kaffir corn nearby as well. Photograph by Constance Stuart Larrabee, 1941.

The following caption is from an article in "Natural History" (September, 1950) in which this photograph was printed: "Summer and winter the Basuto [Sotho] wears his characteristic blanket of gay and varied design and color. Before the days of traders, skin clothing and (in cold weather) a simple undecorated cloak sufficed. Today the Basuto [Lesotho] buys his blankets at European-run trading stores, which are scattered through the territory. The hat is woven of grass by the Basutos [Lesothos] themselves."

There are no prints of this negative in the Constance Stuart Larrabee Collection. EEPA produced an 8x10 study print for reference purposes.

Notes: Sotho Man, 1941. Photographic image of a man wearing a hat and blanket. There is a woman sitting next to her that is partially in the image. The blankets are woven in England with traditional designs, which were probably imported and sold to the early Lesotho people by some wandering trader. However by this time Lesotho people were buying blankets at the trading stores scattered throughout the area. The hat is woven from grass by the Lesotho people. Creator: Larrabee, Constance Stuart

Notes: Transkei Woman Decorating Her Face, 1947. She is sitting in front of a wall of a homestead with her left finger near her left eye applying white clay around the eye. This clay is obtained from the river or by scraping a soft, white stone. She paints her lips with the black nicotine, which is scraped out of the stem of a clay pipe. She is wearing a head wrap, beaded necklaces, beaded earrings, and bracelets. This photograph is apart of a series that is featured earlier in this shoot. Photograph by Constance Stuart Larrabee, 1947.

In 1947, Constance Stuart Larrabee visited the Transkei. She was there researching the housing problems in Southern Africa.

There is one 8x10 black and white vintage print. There is one 4x5 black and white copy negative as well as one copy print of that 4x5 negative. The original 6x6 cm. black and white negative is missing. EEPA has not produced an 8x10 study print for reference purposes.
