Image India: Hindu Temple Rites: Bathing the Image of God, 1969

1 Film reel (color sound; 648 feet; 16mm)

Notes: Edited film: Documents an annual festival of a small Tengali temple in Madras City, India. The special Hindu celebration, utsava, is typical of the minor seasonal festival seen at many South Indian Hindu shrines. Explains the symbolism of the Lord as Supreme Visitor, and discusses the role of priestly specialists. Shows the elaborate bath offered to Lord Vishnu and his two consorts, Goddesses Sri and Bhudevi, the burning of incense, bell-ringing, recitations of prayers, and the distribution of the food offerings to the faithful. Suggests that the temple liturgies are analogous in meaning, intention, and execution to domestic rites at the home shrine, only on a larger scale. Filmed within the Tengelai brahman community of Srivaisnavas.
