Abstract:	The Lisa Chickering and Jeanne Porterfield collection documents their work as travel filmmakers, photographers, and writers from 1954-2015. Their films are an example of the travel lecture film, a genre which combined silent travelogue films with live narration. Chickering and Porterfield presented their films throughout the United States and Canada in the 1960s and 1970s before turning to freelance still photography and travel writing in the early 1980s. The audiovisual and photography collection begins with their first joint travels in the 1950s and covers a range of their professional activities through the early 2000s, mainly encompassing original travel footage, edited travelogues, and travel still photography. Supporting documentation includes film scripts, lecture recordings, personal and professional manuscripts, financial and professional records, and a substantial amount of newspaper and magazine articles which serve as a record of the press generated by and about Chickering and Porterfield.
Language:	Collection is primarily in English. Some printed material is in Portuguese or French.

Administrative Information

Acquisition Information

This collection was donated to the National Anthropological Film Collection (formerly the Human Studies Film Archives) by Lisa Chickering in 2015.

Available Formats

Many of the original sound recordings have been digitized for researcher access. Contact the NAFC for more details.

Processing Information

The collection arrived at the National Anthropological Film Collection in two deposits. The materials were largely ungrouped upon their arrival, often down to the item level; they were arranged by the archivist into series corresponding to the various facets of Chickering and Porterfield's professional lives, with some breakdown by material type. Those materials that were arranged in binders and folders have been retained in original order with original titles.

Processed and encoded by Annie Schweikert, 2017.

Lisa Chickering (1922-) and Jeanne Porterfield (1923-2010) were travel filmmakers, photographers, and writers in New York City whose professional output spanned from the 1960s through the early 2000s. Chickering and Porterfield first met in Chicago, where they were childhood friends and neighbors. Porterfield attended the University of Chicago and eventually earned a master's in musicology from the American Conservatory of Music, after which she trained under Uta Hagen to pursue stage and television acting; Chickering trained as an opera singer and pianist before turning to work as a stage and cabaret singer, as well as a model at the John Robert Powers Agency. The pair's filmmaking career began in 1954, when they traveled to Paris for a singing engagement Chickering had booked. When they arrived, they found the engagement had fallen through. Porterfield began to act as Chickering's agent, and the two cobbled together a three-year international tour, which they documented on an 8mm camera. Upon returning to New York in 1958, they incorporated a production company, Viewpoints, Inc., and returned to Europe to film their first professional project.

Viewpoints, Inc. released five full-length (70-80 minute) silent travelogues through the 1960s and early 1970s, set in Western European and North American tourist destinations: Austria à la Carte (1960), Caribbean Dutch Treat (1963), Bravo Portugal! (1965), Europe's Mini-Countries (1968), and Winter in Mexico (1973). Chickering and Porterfield acted as directors, producers, cinematographers, and editors on each film. The pair also presented these films on the travel lecture film circuit at venues in the United States and Canada ranging from Kiwanis clubs to major concert halls, narrating their silent footage onstage in front of live audiences.

Viewpoints, Inc. also released two shorter 30-minute public relations sound films sponsored by Volkswagen of America: Four Seasons of Austria (1962, which used footage from Austria à la Carte) and Portugal with Pleasure (1968, which used footage from Bravo Portugal!). Both of these films won awards at the American Film Festival. A third public relations film, co-sponsored by KLM Royal Dutch Airlines and the Curaçao Tourism Board and titled Curaçao: The Caribbean Dutch Treat, was released in 1962 and used footage from Caribbean Dutch Treat.

Chickering and Porterfield turned to still photography in earnest in the 1980s and continued working through the early 2000s; their work was published as educational filmstrips as well as in various leading travel and lifestyle publications, including in The New York Times, Travel & Leisure, Town & Country, Glamour, Gourmet, Harper's Bazaar, and Better Homes & Gardens. The pair also authored a number of travel features to accompany their photos, with a particular emphasis on cruise ships.

Porterfield died in 2010 in New York City, where Lisa still lives.

Scope and Content Note

The Lisa Chickering and Jeanne Porterfield collection documents their work as travel filmmakers, photographers, and writers from 1954-2015. The audiovisual and photography collection begins with their first joint travels in the 1950s and covers a range of their professional activities through the early 2000s, mainly encompassing original travel footage, edited travelogues, and travel still photography. Supporting documentation includes film scripts, lecture recordings, personal and professional manuscripts, financial and professional records, and a substantial amount of newspaper and magazine articles which serve as a record of the press generated by and about Chickering and Porterfield.

Records pertaining to Chickering and Porterfield's film career include full lecture scripts for their five major silent travel films: Austria à la Carte (1960), Caribbean Dutch Treat (1963), Bravo Portugal! (1965), Europe's Mini-Countries (1968), and Winter in Mexico (1973). Chickering and Porterfield delivered these scripts at venues throughout the United States in front of live audiences while the (silent) travelogues were screened behind them, essentially acting as live narrators. Silent access copies are available for each of these films except for Austria à la Carte; audio recordings of their live lectures are available for Austria à la Carte, Caribbean Dutch Treat, Winter in Mexico. Reference video is also available for Chickering and Porterfield's two shorter sound films: Four Seasons of Austria (1962) and Portugal with Pleasure (1968). Other film material includes several sets of lecture tour records listing dates, locations, topics, and fees, as well as a large amount of advertising material.

Also included in this collection are a large number of published and unpublished manuscripts, including both personal projects and assignment travel writing. Several personal narrative essays and more complete memoir drafts give insight into Chickering and Porterfield's filmmaking process, industry tips, and travel methods, as well as anecdotes from the field. Assignment travel writing ranges geographically, with a focus on cruise ships.

Other materials in the collection include extensive inventories of still photography, personal and professional correspondence, and a substantial amount of printed material which was retained as a central resource for press generated by and about Chickering and Porterfield.

Container Listing

Series 1: Film documentation, 1959-1986, undated

1.77 linear feet

Series 1 consists of paper materials from 1959-1986 and undated related to Chickering and Porterfield's travel lecture films. These materials include scripts, lecture records, promotional materials and advertisements, and supplementary production materials including continuity sheets and decorative maps. Included also are materials for an unrealized travel television show using the same or similar footage.

The scripts consist of full and incomplete narrations for the lectures Chickering and Porterfield delivered over their five silent travel films. Lecture records and promotional materials provide specificity about itineraries, fees, hosts, and peers on the travel lecture circuit. Paper materials found in film cans are technical and provide records of timing, color correction, and cleaning.

Note that some films were occasionally referred to by different titles (most notably, Tropical Touch of the Dutch for Caribbean Dutch Treat). Materials have been filed under the predominating name.

For sound recordings of several live travel film lectures delivered by Chickering and Porterfield, see series 7. For material related to Chickering and Porterfield's umbrella production company, Viewpoints, Inc., see series 5.1. For associated still photography captions, please see series 2.2.

This series is arranged in 4 subseries: 1.1 Paper materials found in film cans, 1964-1976, undated; 1.2 Scripts, circa 1960-circa 1973; 1.3 Lecture circuit materials, 1959-1986, undated; 1.4 Supplementary production material, circa 1960-circa 1963.

1.2: Scripts, circa 1960-circa 1973

This subseries consists of scripts for the five full-length travel lecture films released by Chickering and Porterfield. No scripts exist for their two shorter sound films, as they would not have delivered lectures over the films' existing soundtracks.

Folders house both complete script copies and various drafts for each film. The complete copies were found assembled in labeled folders. Other drafts, complete and incomplete, were found bundled together, with pages mixed and out of order. They have been reassembled and associated by the archivist.

Arranged chronologically by film release date; note that these copies of the scripts are not dated and may have originated later than the film itself.

Series 2: Still photography documentation, 1958-2004, undated

2.09 linear feet

Series 2 consists of materials from 1958-2004 and undated related to Chickering and Porterfield's still photography career. These materials include financial records, correspondence, inventories and captions of prints and slides, releases, and tear sheets (printed material used as proof of publication).

"Master lists" of slide inventories are in chronological order, generally grouped by Chickering and Porterfield's travel. Individual images are listed with descriptive captions. More background information can be found in their field logs, which cover trips from 1970-2002. Financial records include quarterly statements detailing purchasing company, slide subject, and price; tear sheets provide examples of their work as it appeared in print. Chickering and Porterfield also made a series of filmstrips for the Society for Visual Education, material for which can be found in Series 8.

Chickering and Porterfield worked with various stock photography and filmstrip companies to distribute and license their still photography. Materials were received assembled in tabbed binders divided by company, and has been maintained in this original order with original subseries divisions.

For more tear sheets and printed material, please see series 4. For material related to Chickering and Porterfield's umbrella company, Viewpoints, Inc., see series 5.1. For photographic prints, negatives, and slides, see series 9.

This series is arranged in 2 subseries: 2.1 Company subject files, 1965-2004; 2.2 Releases, captions, and field logs, 1958-1996, undated.

2.1: Company subject files, 1965-2004

This subseries consists of materials associated with stock photography and filmstrip companies through which Chickering and Porterfield distributed their photography, and includes financial records, correspondence, inventories, and tear sheets (i.e., printed material used as proof of publication).

Companies include: CMR, a company with which Chickering and Porterfield stored written clips and records of publication (full name unknown); Photo Researchers, Inc., a stock photography company; Society for Visual Education, Inc., a producer and distributor of educational sound filmstrips; and Words and Pictures, a photo distribution company (holdings also distributed under the name PictureQuest).

Materials were received assembled in tabbed binders divided by company. Arrangement has been maintained alphabetically by company, with original series and subseries divisions.

Series 3: Writings, 1954-1997, undated

0.63 linear feet

Series 3 consists of materials from 1954-1997 and undated related to Chickering and Porterfield's writing projects and published work. These materials include drafts of published and unpublished short travel essays and book chapters, compiled autobiographical reference material, and correspondence.

Chickering and Porterfield's writing output included several unfinished and unpublished projects, the most significant being a memoir entitled Behind the Travel Picture. Drafts of chapters of this project cover both "how-to" advice and personal anecdotes from their film career. Other writing projects included more straightforward travel writing (a compendium of walking tours and a guide to Europe's Miniature Countries), as well as writing more focused on history and local traditions. Published materials include travel writing manuscripts on a wide range of geographic subjects for a variety of magazine and newspaper publications.

Exact authorship is generally unattributed in unpublished materials, though the bulk is likely Chickering's output, as she is cited as "writing a book" in press clippings as early as 1956 (Graves, Beatrice. "Once She Tried to Tunnel Her Way to Hongkong," The China Sunday Post-Herald. 3 June 1956).

In some cases, Chickering and Porterfield separated materials by publishing entity; these divisions were maintained. Manuscripts are dated circa publication date, when known. Not all material may have been published.

For tear sheets and printed material, please see series 4.

This series is arranged in 3 subseries: 3.1 Book materials, undated; 3.2 Other personal narratives, 1954-1955, undated; 3.3 Travel writing manuscripts, circa 1982-circa 1995, undated.

3.1: Book materials, undated

This subseries consists of collected source material, correspondence with advisers, chapter and excerpt drafts, and manuscript packages for Behind the Travel Picture; notes and pitches for Europe's Miniature Countries; notes, pitches, and drafts for Take a Walk; and pitches and drafts of an untitled memoir project.

Chickering and Porterfield's major writing project was a memoir entitled Behind the Travel Picture, whose component chapters went through several edits; some of these chapters were eventually broken further down into short essays. Another project, entitled Take a Walk, would have been a compendium of walking tours; Europe's Miniature Countries would have been a travel guide in the vein of their film of the same title; and an untitled travel prose memoir focused on history and local traditions. None of these projects were published. Some anecdotes appear repeatedly across different projects.

Series 4: Printed material, 1959-2002, undated

5.11 linear feet

Series 4 consists of materials from 1959-2002, undated, and is comprised of magazine and newspaper articles in two categories: articles and photography generated by Chickering and Porterfield, and articles by others concerning Chickering and Porterfield. The former is largely made up of travel writing and photography over a wide geographic range, and includes a substantial amount of work on cruise ship vacations. The latter primarily addresses the pair's filmmaking career, with a large volume of articles from the 1960s-1970s. The materials in this series include original newsprint and magazines as well as photocopies, and were retained to provide the researcher with a centralized collection of press generated by Chickering and Porterfield in their professional lives.

For travel writing manuscripts, please see series 3.3. For associated photography, see series 9.

This series is arranged in 2 subseries: 4.1 Press, 1956-1993, undated; 4.2 Tear sheets, 1965-2002.

4.1: Press, 1956-1993, undated

This subseries consists of articles and press written by others about Chickering and Porterfield, as well as the fields of travel film and photography more generally.

Arranged chronologically.

4.2: Tear sheets, 1965-2002

This subseries consists of tear sheets used as proof of publishing; Chickering and Porterfield kept both printed and photocopied records of their work in its published context. This work consists of travel writing and photography over a wide geographic range, with a later emphasis on cruise ship vacations. A few articles deal more specifically with filmmaking and photography techniques.

These tear sheets arrived assembled in curated sets housed in binders and envelopes. Material was arranged chronologically in several areas: subject (cruise ships), company (The New York Times), format (magazine), and portfolio highlights for personal and professional use. These original divisions were maintained. Duplicates of articles exist between the various sets of tear sheets.

Series 5 consists of materials from 1987-2000, undated, related to businesses and professional organizations of which Chickering and Porterfield were owners or members. Papers were organized within tabbed binders according to subject, meaning materials such as correspondence, receipts, and inventories may be mixed. Material has been maintained in this original order and arranged alphabetically.

Duplicates of articles written by Chickering and Porterfield were retained in this series as these writings provide context for their professional involvement. For the bulk of their written output, please see series 3.

Series 7: Films and film-related sound recordings, circa 1960-2015

5 videocassettes (digital betacam)
5 sound tape reels ; 1/4 inch
5 electronic discs (dvd)
33 film reels ; 16mm
2 sound cassettes

Series 7 consists of Viewpoints, Inc. film and video elements and related sound recordings from circa 1960-2015. These materials directly relate to Chickering and Porterfield's professional film output and consist of edited and unedited film in a variety of formats as well as recordings of the corresponding lectures delivered by Chickering and Porterfield on the travel lecture circuit.

Elements include Kodachrome camera original film in the form of workprints and outtakes; Kodak prints of the edited films, made for potential projection and distribution; videocassette and DVD transfers of the same; and sound recordings used or recorded on tour, including lecture narrative recordings and field sound. Lecture recordings are largely undated but provide a glimpse into the timing and delivery of (and audience reaction to) Chickering and Porterfield's longer lecture films. Some recordings include snippets of other performers.

Chickering and Porterfield released five full-length (70-80 minute) silent travelogues through the production company Viewpoints, Inc. in the 1960s and early 1970s: Austria à la Carte (1960), Caribbean Dutch Treat (1963), Bravo Portugal! (1965), Europe's Mini-Countries (1968), and Winter in Mexico (1973). Chickering and Porterfield acted as directors, producers, cinematographers, and editors on each film.

Viewpoints, Inc. also released two shorter 30-minute public relations sound films sponsored by Volkswagen of America: Four Seasons of Austria (1962, which used footage from Austria à la Carte) and Portugal with Pleasure (1968, which used footage from Bravo Portugal!). Curaçao: The Caribbean Dutch Treat (circa 1963) appears to be a trailer or excerpt from the longer film.

This series is arranged in the following subseries chronologically according to film release date: 7.1 Austria à la Carte, circa 1960; 7.2 Four Seasons of Austria, circa 1962; 7.3 Four Seasons of Austria (Outtakes), circa 1962; 7.4 Caribbean Dutch Treat, circa 1963; 7.5 Curaçao: The Caribbean Dutch eat (Trailer), circa 1963; 7.6 Bravo Portugal!, circa 1965; 7.7 Portugal with Pleasure, circa 1968; 7.8 Europe's Mini-Countries, circa 1968; and 7.9 Winter in Mexico, circa 1973.

7.1: Austria à la Carte , circa 1960

Edited film shot in 1958-1959 and released in 1960 representing various attractions and festivals in Austria over the course of a year's seasons, sponsored by Volkswagen. A variety of ceremonial as well as quotidian activities are represented, including: brief musical performances by a brass band and the Viennese Boys' Choir; riding a Ferris wheel; festivals in honor of miners, cows, and the transition from winter to spring; Maypole and sword dancing; games of fingerslapping and finger wrestling; and winter sports including curling, skating, skiing, and horse racing. Footage of tourist landmarks predominates and includes: the Volkswagen factory in Wolfsburg, Germany; the Ringstraße, State Opera, Hofburg Palace, St. Stephen's Cathedral, Stadtpark, the Belvedere, and the Schönbrunn Palace in Vienna; the summer retreat of the Vienna Boys' Choir; the village of Heiligenblut and the Großglockner (Austria's highest mountain) in the Austrian Alps; the Mirabell Gardens and the Hellbrunn Palace and Gardens in Salzburg; and a winter sports competition at Zell am See. Footage is devoted to both rural and urban destinations as well as their residents. The finished film is narrated from the perspective of an American tourist and tends toward the informal and humorous. A shorter sound version, Four Seasons of Austria, was edited from the same footage and released in 1962 under contract with Volkswagen.

Locations include: Vienna, Heiligenblut and the Alps, Salzburg, Zell am See.

7.3: Four Seasons of Austria (Outtakes) , circa 1962

Outtakes to the edited film released in 1962 representing various attractions and festivals in Austria over the course of a year's seasons, sponsored by Volkswagen. Much footage likely dates to time of original silent feature Austria à la Carte; however, both silent and sound stock are present, indicating some outtakes were likely from the later sound edit Four Seasons of Austria. Footage locations and topics are very similar to finished film, though scenes are longer and more extensive.

Locations include: Vienna, Heiligenblut and the Alps, Salzburg, Zell am See.

Similar activities are often shot in two or three locations, allowing for comparison; these broader categories include observational footage of architecture and foot traffic in city centers, rural roads and portraits of individuals, tourists enjoying beach and pool resorts, open air markets, fishing, and dancing. Footage of more specific activities and locations includes: a traditional dance performed outside a rural home and for tourists around a pool; the Trans World Radio and Mortimer B. Fuller Jr. Solar Salt Facility campuses in Bonaire; Fort Orange in St. Eustatius; a Hindu marriage ceremony and performances of traditional dance by the Chinese community in Suriname. 7.8: Europe's Mini-Countries , circa 1968

Edited film shot in 1966-1967 and released in 1968 representing various aspects of daily life in five small European countries. Depicted in each or many of these countries are a wide variety of tourist sites and activities including: castles, government buildings, parks, parades accompanied by military bands, eating in cafés, shopping for souvenirs, demonstrations of traditional dances and dress, tending to farm animals and harvesting crops, and plein air painting. Anonymous citizens are given individual screen time alongside more famous residents, including the royal families of Monaco and Liechtenstein (highlighted in footage of the wedding of Prince Hans-Adam II and Marie Aglaë), oceanographer Jacques-Yves Cousteau, and author Paul Gallico. This film is a travelogue, made to accompany live explanatory lectures by the filmmakers, and as such is missing much identifying information such as photographed signage. The overall effect is impressionistic, with a gentle sense of humor present both in choice of subject and editing.

Locations include: Liechtenstein, Andorra, the Sovereign Military Order of Malta, San Marino, Monaco.

7.9: Winter in Mexico , circa 1973

Edited film shot in the early 1970s and released in 1973 representing various attractions and destinations in Mexico during the winter season. Similar activities are often shot in two or three locations, allowing for comparison; these broader categories include tourists enjoying beach and pool resorts, footage of various temples and ziggurats, open air markets, fishing, and dancing. Notable events include Oaxaca's "Night of the Radishes" and Taxco's Blessing of the Animals ceremony, and a rodeo, but the bulk of the footage is quotidian. Footage is devoted to both rural and urban destinations as well as their residents. This film is a travelogue, made to accompany live explanatory lectures by the filmmakers, and as such is missing much identifying information; for example, though panoramic shots of countryside and towns accompany most changes in setting, there is rarely any photographed signage to identify the new location. The film tends toward the informal and humorous and includes footage of the filmmakers themselves.

Locations include: San Miguel de Allende, Guanajuato, Guadalajara, Mexico City, Acapulco, Oaxaca, Mazatlan, Pátzcuaro, Ajijic.

8.2: Personal, circa 1956, undated

This subseries consists of personal audiovisual materials in Chickering and Porterfield's collection. Of particular note are home movies from a trip around the world in the late 1950s. The films were likely shot before incorporation as Viewpoints, Inc., at which point the pair would have been filming on 16mm (though may also have brought the 8mm camera); circa date is based on newspaper article describing the pair's journeys to Hong Kong (Greaves, Beatrice. "Once she tried to tunnel her way to Hongkong," South China Sunday Post-Herald, 3 June 1956, page unknown). Locations were transcribed from original housing. Also in the collection is a tape of telephone messages.

Arranged chronologically based on geographic location, as Chickering and Porterfield appear to have traveled west to east.

65.68 linear feet

This series consists of Chickering and Porterfield's photography from 1956 to 2002 and undated, the vast majority of which is professional travel photography output in the form of prints, negatives, or slides. Chickering and Porterfield traveled throughout the United States and world, including a number of cruises; North American, Caribbean, and European tourist sites and ports are particularly well-represented within the collection.

Due to the large size of the photography collection—an estimated 168,000 slides and approximately 7 linear feet of prints and negatives—the collection has been minimally processed. Many materials returned from The New York Times and Photo Researchers remain in their original mailing envelopes with relevant labels preserved. The collection has been separated by format for ease of storage and preservation.

All photographs have been assigned accession number NAFC 2015.16.1 OP. Binders of slides have been assigned unique numbers (XXX) in the format NAFC 2015.16.1-XXX OP.

This series is arranged in 3 subseries: 9.1 Film-related photography, circa 1960-1973; 9.2 Personal photography, 1956-2002, undated; 9.3 Travel photography, 1963-2001, undated.

9.1: Film-related photography, circa 1960-1973

6.78 linear feet

This subseries consists of prints and negatives associated with Chickering and Porterfield's travel lecture films. Photographs are largely of the same subjects depicted in these films. Countries represented include: Andorra, Aruba, Austria, Bonaire, Curacao, Liechtenstein, Malta, Mexico, Monaco, Portugal, San Marino, the Sovereign Military Order of Malta, and Suriname.

For more photography of the above countries (not established to be directly related to the film projects) please see series 9.3.

Arranged chronologically by film release date. Many materials still in original housing. Cardboard-mounted photographs and large negative sheets in oversized housing.

This subseries consists of miscellaneous and promotional prints and negatives of and by Chickering and Porterfield. Photographs of interest include personal photographs from childhood and young adulthood, photographs from the pair's first trip around the world in 1956 and a number of subsequent journeys, and professional portraits of Chickering and Porterfield (both headshots and at lectures).

Photographs arrived loose and remain unarranged. Many materials still in original housing.

9.3: Travel photography, 1963-2001, undated

57.42 linear feet

This subseries consists of prints, negatives, and slides produced by Chickering and Porterfield in their print photography career. It is arranged in two further subseries: 9.3.1 Selected photographs, circa 1985-circa 1995; and 9.3.2 Travel slide collection, 1963-2001, undated.

Subseries 9.3.1 consists of prints, negatives, and slides. Prints and negatives are largely associated with the New York Times, while slides were mostly deposited with Photo Researchers; these images, which often remained in their original return mailing envelopes, were selected by Chickering and Porterfield for publication submission and may or may not have been published.

Subseries 9.3.2 encompasses an estimated 146,500 35mm slides with a wide geographic range, though a particular emphasis on North American, Caribbean, and European tourist sites and ports. Many slides (especially those sent out for deposit with a stock photography company) are individually labeled with explanatory captions. In contrast to 9.3.2, these slides remained in the binders in which Chickering and Porterfield had originally housed them, suggesting they were retained in storage rather than submitted for publication. Slides that had been housed in binders are arranged alphabetically by geographic location, then chronologically. Other photographs arrived loose and generally remain unarranged. Many materials still in original housing.

9.3.1: Selected photographs, circa 1965-2001, undated

This subseries consists of prints, negatives, and slides created by Chickering and Porterfield on travels throughout the world for professional publication. Photographs span a wide geographic range, with a particular emphasis on North American, Caribbean, and European tourist sites, as well as cruises in the same areas. There are 1.25 linear feet of prints and negatives and an estimated 16,500 slides in this subseries.

The photographs in this series appear to have been submitted for publication by Chickering and Porterfield. Prints and negatives were largely stored in return envelopes from the New York Times, while slides were in return envelopes from Photo Researchers or were found individually mounted and captioned; these original housings suggest the photographs in this series were selected by Chickering and Porterfield as examples of their best work.

Photographs arrived loose and remain unarranged. Many materials still in original housing. Arranged by photographic material type (prints/negatives, 35mm slides, 2 1/4 inch slides), then by geographic region when applicable.

9.3.2: Travel slide collection, 1963-2001, undated

This subseries consists of slides Chickering and Porterfield photographed on travels throughout the world and stored in a series of binders by geographic destination. There are an estimated 146,500 slides in this subseries.

Though these slides were likely made at the same time as the 35mm slides in subseries 9.3.1, they appear to have been retained in storage rather than submitted for publication. Note that sheets of individually captioned slides, typically at the front of each binder, may have been removed for publication submission and later replaced (see subseries 9.3.1 for similar slide sheets that were deposited with Photo Researchers).

Binder titles and identifying numbers (in the format NAFC 2015.16.1-XXX OP) have been assigned by the archivist for clarity and consistency of reference. Slides within have been rehoused in folders and maintained in original order. Each set of folders labeled with the same number and title represents one original binder; note that one binder may span multiple trips to the same location, or one trip may span multiple binders. Documentation found in binder pockets, such as maps, brochures, and schedules, were filed at the beginning of each binder's folder series.

Handwritten notes on any original binder dividers and tabs have been recorded on the finding aid. In transcription of handwritten notes, "R+O" appears to refer to "remains and outs," and "P.R." has been expanded to "Photo Researchers."

Arranged alphabetically by geographic location (first by NAFC major geographic region, then by country or state), then chronologically. Dates were determined from the developed slides and may not correspond exactly to the original trip.
