Repository:	National Anthropological Archives
Title:	Homer Garner Barnett Papers
Date:	1934-1973
Identifier:	NAA.1975-17
Creator:	Barnett, H. G. (Homer Garner), 1906-1985
Extent:	7.5 Linear feet
Language:	Material is in English, Dutch, and German.
Summary:	The Homer Garner Barnett papers, 1934-1973, consist of papers, photographs, slides, maps, and periodicals primarily documenting his ethnological work among American Indians, Palauans, and the people of Netherlands New Guinea (Irian Jaya).

Administrative Information

Acquisition Information

Dr. Homer G. Barnett donated this collection to the National Anthropological Archives in 1975.

Related Materials

In 1939, Dr. Barnett was the director of an archeological excavation in the Santa Fe National Forest in New Mexico. The report of this dig is NAA MS 4070. Another paper Barnett wrote, Yakima Indians in 1942 is NAA MS 4867.

Biographical Note

Homer G. Barnett trained at the University of California at Berkeley and practiced as an ethnologist and archeologist. He specialized in culture change and applied anthropology.

Barnett's earliest field work was among American Indians of Oregon, Washington, and northwestern California--particularly the Yurok, Hupa, Yakima, and several small groups of the Oregon coast. Some of his research concerned diverse ethnological matters but much of it focused primarily on the Indian Shaker religion and the potlatch, the latter being the subject of his doctoral dissertation.

In 1939, while he was on the faculty of the University of New Mexico, Barnett served as field director of the Jemez Archeological Field School and was in charge of a project in the Santa Fe National Forest in New Mexico. Later in the same year, he joined the faculty of the University of Oregon and has been chiefly identified with that institution since then. In the summer of 1943, however, he participated in a World War II Far Eastern Language and Area Training Program of the University of California at Berkeley. There he helped train volunteer service men in techniques of eliciting cultural information from native informants.

In the following year, he joined the staff of the Bureau of American Ethnology and became a researcher associated with the Ethnogeographic Board, the World War II agency formed to provide scientific information about human and natural resources of the world. He served as the executive secretary of the Board's Pacific Survey Project and, later, undertook a War Document Survey concerning the Pacific to determine and advise on the disposition of documents that had been accumulated by the government.

Returning to the University of Oregon after the war, Barnett continued to work with Pacific cultures. He carried out field work in the Palau Islands under the sponsorship of the National Research Council, served as staff anthropologist for the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and was a consultant for the government of Netherlands New Guinea. In the 1960s, he directed a program of research among communities of the Pacific displaced because of natural disasters and atomic bomb tests.

Scope and Contents

The Homer Garner Barnett papers, 1934-1973, contain papers, photographs, slides, maps, periodicals, field notes and copies of studies done by others. Dr. Barnett, an ethnologist, anthropologist, author and teacher spent his early professional years, 1934-1943, studying Northwest Coast Indians. After the second World War, he focused on Micronesia, especially Palau, and later Netherlands New Guinea, now known as West Irian. It was during this time that he observed at close hand and became an expert in cultural change.

Between 1947 and 1970, years of drastic change for natives of Oceania, Dr. Barnett made three long stays and many shorter ones in the islands. He used his research in writing, teaching, and consulting.

His early study of Yurok, Hupa, Karok, Nuqually, Oakville and Skopomish Indians is contained in research notebooks, field notebooks and photographs. There is an interesting section on Indian Shakerism (not related to the Shaker Movement of the East). One notebook records his experience while conducting a class at Berkeley in 1943 on inter-cultural exchange of information. The later field notebooks record his observations while on Palau and New Guinea. There are also approximately 900 slides that he used in class lectures.

Dr. Barnett amassed a large collection of scholarly papers and periodicals dealing with the South Pacific area, especially during the years 1952-1960. There are a few publications in Japanese reflecting the interests of the prior trustees of Palau. There are significant numbers of scientific papers in Dutch on natives of New Guinea. He also preserved interesting examples of literature in Palauan, pidgin English and Papuan.

There is no personal correspondence other than that pertaining to setting up a study of displaced communities in the South Pacific. This study was funded over a 5-year period by the National Science Foundation. The resulting papers are on deposit at the University of Oregon.

Dr. Barnett spent 2 years (1944-1946) as Senior Fellow in ethnogeography at the Bureau of American Ethnology (BAE). There are no papers in this collection dating from those years, but the BAE Correspondence files contain letters to and from Barnett during this period.

Please note that the contents of the collection and the language and terminology used reflect the context and culture of the time of its creation. As an historical document, its contents may be at odds with contemporary views and terminology and considered offensive today. The information within this collection does not reflect the views of the Smithsonian Institution or National Anthropological Archives, but is available in its original form to facilitate research.

Arrangement

The Homer Garner Barnett papers are arranged in the following series: (1) Material relating to the "Displaced Communities" Study, 1963-1970; (2) Writings, 1938-1959; (3) Field notebooks, 1934-circa 1955; (4) Dissertation notebooks, undated; (5) Linguistic material, 1941-1965; (6) Scholarly serials and periodicals, 1950-1971; (7) Processed and printed items, 1942-1974; (8) Photographs, 1895-1955; (9) Micronesian Monthly/Reporter, 1951-1963; (10) Quarterly Bulletin of the South Pacific Commission, 1953-1963; (11) Photographic slides, 1947-1953; (12) Maps, 1887-1959

Container Listing

Series 1: Materials relating to "Displaced Communities" study, 1963 - 1970, undated

0.062 Linear feet

Scope and Contents: Official correspondence, project proposal, reports, and residence permits. The correspondence (some of which is in duplicate) is left grouped in Dr. Barnett's arrangement. The project to study cultural change and stability in displaced communities in the South Pacific area was funded by the National Science Foundation. The goal was to send graduate student field workers to specific areas which were inhabited by displaced native groups --some for reasons for volcanic activity, some for governmental reasons such as atomic testing, some for reasons of weather such as drought and do an intensive study. The students returned to the University of Oregon where they produced reports. These reports are on deposit at the Department of Anthropology at the University of Oregon. The project proposal also includes detailed curriculum vitae for Dr. Barnett, his associated in Australia and the U.S. Trust Territory, Cyril Belshaw, Leonard Mason, Henry Evans Maude, and James Spillius.

There are 8 annual reports which cover the 5 years of the study and 3 years of "wrap-up" including lists of the publications which grew out of this study.

Arrangement: Arranged by type, then chronologically.

Series 2: Writings, 1938-1959, undated

0.208 Linear feet

Scope and Contents: "The Innovative Process" is a reprint from Alfred L. Kroeber: A Memorial, Kroeber Anthropological Society Papers, No. 25, Fall 1961, 18pp. It is the only published item. The Nature and Function of the Potlatch was Barnett's Ph. D. dissertation written in 1938 and reproduced by the University of Oregon in 1968. The Yakima Indians of 1942 is a partial duplicate of NAA MS 4867. It lacks the resume pages and photographs. There is a 13-page mimeo report written by Dr. Barnett for the Governor of Netherlands New Guinea. It was based on a visit he made June-August 1955 with the purpose of observing existing conditions among Papuans and how these conditions affected administrative planning and execution. This item was found folded inside the field notebooks marked "Netherlands New Guinea" in Series 3.

Arrangement: Arranged alphabetically by title.

Series 3: Field notebooks, 1934-circa 1955, undated

0.42 Linear feet

Scope and Contents: These 14 notebooks are equally divided between Barnett's two geographic areas of specialization --Northwest Coast Indians and South Pacific natives. The Indian notes were done between 1934 and 1943. The Palauan observations were made probably during 1947 and 1948, although the notebooks are not dated. The New Guinea notes are dated 1955. There is an interesting notebook made when Dr. Barnett taught a class in intercultural exchange at Berkeley in 1943. Notes on Indian Shakerism can be found in "Yakima" Book 2, p. 131. Miscellaneous papers and a card found folded inside the books are in a separate folder. Each item contains information in brackets as to where it was found. Illustrations of the material covered in the notebooks can be found in Series 8, Photographs, and Series 11, Photographic Slides. Dr. Barnett's published works draw heavily from the material in this series.

Arrangement: Arranged alphabetically by title.

Series 4: Dissertation notebooks, undated

0.167 Linear feet

Scope and Contents: The research done by Barnett in other publications, which served as background for his Ph.D. dissertation, is found here. This is valuable for anyone reading his Nature and Function of the Potlatch, Series 2, and any of his field notebooks dated prior to 1938, Series 3. Illustrations can be found in Series 8, Coast Salish Indians in British Columbia.

Arrangement: Arranged according to author's numbering.

Series 5: Linguistic materials, 1941 - 1965, undated

0.167 Linear feet

Scope and Contents: Primers, dictionaries, word lists, research on linguistic methods, and newspapers (if in an indigenous dialect) are in this group. Not every item is complete in and of itself. There is a predominance of items produced by missionary endeavor. The Palauan section contains 15 separate items ranging from Psalm I to a reprint of BAE Bulletin article entitled "A Caroline Islands Script" by Saul Riesenberg and Shigeru Kaneshiro. The New Guinea pidgin English collection consists of 9 items. A small collection, 3 items, deals with research in Papuan.

Arrangement: Arranged by language group.

Series 6: Scholarly serials and periodicals, 1950 - 1971

0.54 Linear feet

Scope and Contents: Publications of scholarly value issued as part of a discernible series by educational, professional and quasi-governmental groups. Some of the publications are listings of members with their areas of specialization. Material found in Series 7, Netherlands New Guinea section, contains much of ethnological, anthropological and linguistic interest as well. The periodicals found in Series 9 and Series 10 are more general in coverage but very similar in subject. The "folder list" has an item by item record of this series.

Return to Table of Contents

Series 7: Processed and printed items, 1942 - 1974

1.08 Linear feet

Arrangement: Arranged according to geographical area and then by date if possible. Undated items are grouped at the end.

Scope and Contents: This group covers the widest range of items from a rare Japanese language volume on Palauan myths to table place mats printed with the Lord's Prayer in Chinook. There is a set of directives and regulations for the Naval administration of the then (1946) newly acquired islands of Micronesia. These islands were mandated to the United States as a trust territory after the second World War. They had been a Japanese mandate between the two wars. Micronesia is now officially called the Federated States of Micronesia. The Marianas voted to become a territory of the U.S., a decision which some feel was forced on them by U.S. needs for a secure strategic base in the Western Pacific.

There are newsletters, a calendar, newsclippings, reports and reflections of attempts made by the U.S. to administer the disparate islands flung over an area as large as the U.S. itself. Of significance to researchers is the material relating to Netherlands New Guinea. Under the Dutch form of colonial government, the Bureau of Native Affairs was really a research institute, which also acted as an official advisory body. In 1955, Dr. Barnett served as a consultant. His report is found in Series 2 and contains a warning on the influences, which would soon change that area into West Irian.

Series 10: Quarterly Bulletin of the South Pacific Commission, 1953-1963

0.67 Linear feet

Scope and Contents: The South Pacific Commission is an advisory and consultative body set up by the six governments responsible for the administration of the island territories in the South Pacific region. Its purpose is to recommend to members the means of promoting well being of the native peoples. The headquarters is at Noumea, New Caledonia. The 12 members, 2 for each government, represent Australia, France, Netherlands, New Zealand, United Kingdom, and the U.S.

The Quarterly Bulletin contains articles in the three main areas of interest to the Commission --economic development, health and social development. They often comment on the projects discussed in the Technical Papers and Social Development Notes of the South Pacific Commission in Series 6.

Arrangement: Arranged chronologically.

Series 11: Photographic slides, 1947-1953, undated

900 Slides

Scope and Contents: The subjects covered are scenes, objects, person's actions, processes of the South Pacific islands, New Guinea and the Philippines. There are a few slides of Hawaii. Two reels of color motion picture film are labeled "Philippine Dance 1947."

Some of the slides taken by Dr. Barnett in Palau in 1947 and 1948 are accompanied by coded lists, which help to identify the slides. Other slides have information written on the mounts. Subjects include geographic areas of the U.S. Trust Territory of the Pacific, Australia, Netherlands New Guinea and the Philippines. Barnett used these slides in his class lectures. It is easy to note which were not taken by Dr. Barnett due to the difference in subject.

Arrangement: Arranged according to Barnett's coded listing.

Box 14; Box 15	"List A" Kodachrome slides of Palau by Barnett, 1947 - 1948
Box 15	"List B" Slides of Oahu, Hawaii [Coded 27-1 thru 27-22], Babeldaob, Palau Island, undated Digital Content
