Administrative Information

Acquisition Information

The collection was formed largely from four sources: (1) Smithsonian curators, who received contract archaeology reports and passed them on to the NAA; (2) the NAA, which was on the mailing list of some contractors; (3) the Smithsonian Anthropology Library, which turned over its collection to the archives; (4) the National Park Service archaeology program in Washington, D.C., which also placed its collection in the NAA

Preferred Citation

Archaeology reports and related material collection, National Anthropological Archives, Smithsonian Institution

Restrictions

The Archaeology reports and related material collection is open for research.

Access to the Archaeology reports and related material collection requires an appointment.

Conditions Governing Use

Contact the repository for terms of use.

Scope and Contents

With the passage of federal environmental and cultural heritage legislation during the 1960s, 1970s, and 1980s, archaeological investigations were required before federal land could be disturbed for construction projects. Reports of these investigations, often conducted by archaeological contractors, were generally published in processed rather than printed form. The multiliths, electrostats, ditto-graphs, and so forth are referred to as "grey literature." Access to them is sometimes difficult because many libraries decline to collect them.

Included are reports on archaeological work in Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, California, Canada (Alberta), Colorado, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Minnesota, Montana, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Puerto Rico, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virgin Islands, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

Please note that the contents of the collection and the language and terminology used reflect the context and culture of the time of its creation. As an historical document, its contents may be at odds with contemporary views and terminology and considered offensive today. The information within this collection does not reflect the views of the Smithsonian Institution or National Anthropological Archives, but is available in its original form to facilitate research.

Archeological Investigations at Site 42SA20286 Canyonlands National Park, Utah, 1994

1 Volume (143 pages + vi)

Creator: Dominguez, Steve

Language: Undetermined.

Notes: Cite as book.

Site 42SA20286 is an open lithic scatter located on the west bank of Salt Creek in the Needles District of Canyonlands National Park, Utah. The site is considered eligible for nomination to the National Register of Historic Places by consensus with the Utah State Historic Preservation Officer. In September 1989, subsurface investigations were conducted in and near areas of the site to be impacted by bridge construction.

From September 18 to 29, 1989, field investigations were conducted at an archeological site to be impacted by construction of the Highway 211 bridge over Salt Creek (Utah Project No. U-89-NA-210n) in Needles District of Canyonlands National Park, Utah. The purpose of archeological work at site was to evaluate the composition, extent, and integrity of cultural remains with the construction area and to mitigate impacts.

Language: Undetermined.

Notes: The goal of this investigation was to document the original land area of the Fort Randall Post Cemetery and the number of interments. Remote sensing techniques were utilized to complement the historical documentation. Of 127 graves previously documented, 67 were recorded as having been disinterred and removed to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, in 1893. Research at the Navy and Old Army Branch of the Military Archives Division of the National Archives located two plans of the cemetery and the official quartermaster's record of burials. All recorded graves, as well as a number of undocumented graves, were located, with subsurface coring confirming the presence of graves where depressions were not visible. One grave shown on the original plan to be extant was excavated and found to have been removed. Working with the original cemetery plan, the elaborate network of footpaths was depicted by outlining the borders with a paint-striping machine. Aerial photos were prepared to provide a visual record of how actual reconstruction of the footpaths might appear.

Abstract The Sponsored Research Program of the Arkansas Archeological Survey surveyed a 90 x40 meter area within the Pea Ridge National Military Park, Benton County, for cultural resources prior to construction of an equipment storage facility. The Pea Ridge Military Park is the site of a Civil War battle, with both Federal and Confederate artillery batteries located north of the project area. No artifacts from the engagement or other 19th to mid 20th century historic artifacts were found. A small sparse prehistoric lithic scatter (3B#589) was present, but does not merit listing on the National Register of Historic Places.

An Archeological Overview and Management Plan for the Lone Star Armh
Ammunition Plant, Bowie County, Texas, 1984

193 Pages

Creator:	Heartfield, Lorraine Dieste, Tony Heartfield, Price and Greene, Inc subcontractor
Contractor:	Woodward-Clyde Consultants
Sponsor:	United States. Department of the Interior. National Park Service. Atlanta, Georgia
Language:	Undetermined.
Notes:	Available for public release without appended site locational data. Unclassified.

The Lone Star Army Ammunition Plant (AAP), located in Bowie County, northeast Texas, includes 15,545 acres and is an installation of the U. S. Army DARCOM Command. As a steward of public lands, the installation has responsibility for the management of all cultural resources within its boundaries. At present, there have been no archeological studies conducted on the property. However, a review of existing data concerning the physical and cultural backgrounds of the area has revealed that the facility has a very high potential for containing many archeological sites, both prehistoric and historic. A potential Paleo-Indian component has been reported on the facility. A total of 141 historic sites have been documented through archival research, including nine cemeteries and 132 homestead sites present in 1904-1906 and very likely dating from the nineteenth century. The facility needs to develop a cultural resources management plan for general compliance with the National Historic Preservation Act and Army regulation AR420-40, in order to assure that its on-going silviculture program proposed future oil and gas exploration leasing, and facility expansion are in compliance with Section 106 of that Act. Formulation of a facility Historic Preservation Plan, developed in consideration of both known and potential cultural resources, is recommended and scoped.

ARC 1, National Anthropological Archives, Smithsonian Institution

Available for public release without appended site locational data.

This report was prepared as part of the DARCOM historical/ archeological Survey (DHAS), an inter-agency technical services program to develop facility-specific archeological overviews and management plans for the U. S. Army Materiel Development and Readiness Command (DARCOM).

Notes: This report describes data recovered from three aboriginal villages along the Missouri River by the Smithsonian Institution, River Basin Surveys in 1965. The Mush Creek site is a component of the Post-Contact Coalescent Variant dated between A. D. 1750 and 1850. The Bowman site appears to be transitional between the prehistoric Extended Coalescent Variant and the proto-historic Post-Contact Coalescent Variant. The Grandle site has components of the Initial Coalescent Variant (A. D. 1875-1525), and the Extended Coalescent Variant (A. D. 1475-1725). Culture-historical assignments are based on ceramic typologies and frequencies. Recovered features and materials are briefly described; detailed artifact catalogues are included.
