Administrative Information

Acquisition Information

These papers were deposited at the National Anthropological Archives by the Central States Anthropological Society archivists.

Related Materials

The records of the American Anthropological Association, the parent association of the Central States Anthropological Society, are held at the National Anthropological Archives.

Processing Information

The records of the Central States Anthropological Society (CSAS) were first compiled, organized, and deposited at the National Anthropological Archives by Barry L. Isaac, secretary-treasurer of CSAS in 1975-76 and first archivist for the society. His organizing scheme was retained when the collection was first processed. Subsequent deposits by Pamela Effrein Sandstrom, the second archivist for CSAS, were organized by president. Many of these files, however, were separated and incorporated into Isaac's organization. In 2012, in consultation with Sandstrom, the collection was reorganized into the present 9 series. Cancelled checks and bank statement were also removed from the collection. Computer disks were separated due to preservation concerns. In 2024, accessions 2000-42 and 2015-06 were incorporated into the collection.

Processed by Jill Fri (NAA volunteer) and Pamela Effrein Sandstrom (CSAS archivist)

Encoded by Jocelyn Baltz, June 2012

Restrictions

Materials relating to CSAS award applicants and selected correspondence from 1976-77 are restricted until 10 years after the death of the correspondents. Computer disks are restricted due to preservation concerns.

Historical Note

The Central States Anthropological Society (CSAS) was established as the Central Section of the American Anthropological Association (AAA), and it has informally been called the Central States Branch. Samuel A. Barrett led the creation of the new organization. The motivation was the difficulty for anthropologists of the central United States to attend AAA meetings, for the AAA had come to convene only in large northeastern or Middle Atlantic cities. The section's stated purpose was to promote "the cause of anthropology by means of a closer fraternization of the central states." "Central states" meant the entire region lying between the Appalachian and Rocky mountains. In fact, however, CSAS has been most successful and influential in the midwestern states.

The AAA approved the organization of the Central Section through a constitutional amendment adopted in December 1921. The section's constitution was adopted at its first meeting in 1922. It provided for two categories of membership—members who belonged to the AAA and associates who belonged to only the section. Both could vote and hold office. The constitution vested governance in an executive council made up of members elected to an executive committee together with the society's officers. The members of the executive committee itself were originally elected by a larger council, but the council was abolished in 1947. Since then the committee has been elected directly by the membership.

The original constitution provided for officers including a president, two vice presidents, a secretary-treasurer, and a corresponding secretary. The section failed to fill the latter office until 1952; and three years later the position was abolished as was the position of secretary-treasurer. Replacing them were two offices, a secretary and a treasurer. In 1957, the two offices were again combined as secretary-treasurer. In 1967, the officers came to include a newsletter editor and, in 1975, a proceedings editor. Both editors sat on the council as nonvoting members. The CSAS created other officers in 1975, including an immediate past president and a "student-liaison person," both of whom took places on the council. Also in 1975, the first vice president was designated to become the next president and the second vice president was designated to succeed the first vice president. (See Appendix A for a list of CSAS presidents.)

The main function of the Central Section has been the annual meeting. During the first few decades, these featured papers by many outstanding midwestern anthropologists. In keeping with the strong regional interest in archeology, the content was heavily archeological. This strong bent continued even after 1935 when many Central Section members joined the newly formed Society for American Archaeology (SAA). Until the 1950s, there was a strong connection between these two organizations, and they held joint meetings for many years. So strong was the connection, in fact, that the Central Section came to doubt its ability to hold a successful meeting on its own and feared that reduction of the archeological content of its programs would lead the archeologists to go off on their own and pull many section members along with them. Not until the SAA began to hold meetings outside the Middle West and the Central Section joined in meetings with other organizations did the Central Section strengthen its sociocultural interest, which has since become dominate. By 1951, the Executive Board of the AAA voted to accept the organization's official name change to Central States Anthropological Society.

A condition of the special relationship with the AAA was support for the American Anthropologist. In return, the AAA provided a service in collecting the regular AAA dues from section members and turning a portion over to the section. This arrangement continued until 1959, when the AAA began to keep its entire dues and collected an additional amount for the section. In 1967, the AAA announced that it could no longer continue to offer such services without compensation. At that point, the CSAS broke the relationship. By 1972, the AAA was again providing the society billing services for a fee. In 1985, the CSAS became a constituent society in the AAA reorganization.

The Central States Branch established its own publication program when, from 1946-1952, it issued a mimeographed newsletter called the Central States Bulletin. In 1966, CSAS began to issue the Central States Anthropological Society Newsletter. In 1973, it also began to publish the Central States Anthropological Society Proceedings, which, in 1978, became Central Issues in Anthropology. Other than for these publications, most reports of and announcements about the organization have appeared in the AAA publications. During the 1950s and 1960s, the CSAS began efforts to promote improved graduate training. In 1953, it began to sponsor a Prize Paper Contest for students. In the 1960s, it surveyed regional graduate education and also explored possibilities for assisting with field training, lectures by visiting foreign anthropologists, and several other programs. In addition, special programs at annual meetings concerned education and teaching. The first of CSAS's two scholarship programs, the Leslie A. White Memorial Fund, was established in 1983 to support research in any subfield of anthropology by "young scholars" ("young," not in chronological years, but in the sense of new to the discipline). In 1989, a second award, the Beth W. Dillingham Memorial Fund, was set up expressly to provide assistance to young scholars who are responsible for the care of dependent children while pursuing anthropological research. Today, the CSAS remains dedicated to fostering anthropological scholarship and professionalism through its meetings and publications.

Further information about the history of CSAS can be found on the official website at <http://www.aaanet.org/csas/>.

Subseries 1.5: Financial Records

Box 1	Accounts Book, 24 July 1939 to 31 May 1946
	Notes: Hand labeled on outside cover: "Accounts of the Central States Branch of the American Anthropological Association July 24, 1939—Mischa Titiev—Sec-Treas., Paul Nesbitt—Sec-Treas." This "Accounts book" covers the war years—1943, 1944, 1945—during which there was no Annual Meeting and, thus, no other record of finances and membership. Regarding dues schedules, throughout this account book an entry of $6.00 means: $5 collected for AAA dues, $1 collected in CSB dues; the $1 was retained in the CSB Treasury, and the $5 was mailed to the Treasurer of the AAA (Bella Weitzner during most of the period covered by this Accounts Book). The entry of $1.00 followed by "Associate" means: the person was a member of the CSB but not of the AAA itself and hence owed only $1 in dues—for an "Associate Membership" in this Central Section ("Central States Branch"—sic) of the AAA. But the entry of $1.00 designated "Weitzner," "from B. Weitzner," "our share," etc., means: AAA had rebated the CSB its (CSB's) portion ($1) of $6.00 dues paid direct to the AAA. (See the Correspondence files for an extensive discussion of the joint billing procedure.)

Box 1	Untitled Record Book, June 11, 1946 to 1957
	Notes: A 6-page explanation/clarification of the contents of this record book accompanies it. These 6 pages are entitled, "Explanation and Clarification of Item XIV., "Untitled Record Book, June 11, 1946 to 1957," of the Gift of Papers and Other Historical Materials of the Central States Anthropological Society to the National Anthropological Archives, Appendix A by Barry L. Isaac, 1976."

Series 2: Presidents' Files, 1974-2013

Scope and Contents: The files in this series were solicited from past presidents by Pamela Effrein Sandstrom, CSAS archivist. The individuals that served as president were often involved in CSAS in different capacities throughout their professional career. Consequently, these files also document their involvement in CSAS outside of their service as president. Some files, such as reports and meeting minutes, were separated from this series and placed elsewhere in the collection.

For the correspondence of Leslie A. White, president of CSAS 1938-39, see Series 5. Correspondence. The correspondence of other past presidents can also be found interspersed throughout Series 5. Correspondence.

Series 5: Correspondence, 1940-2014

Scope and Contents: The bulk of this series consists of secretary-treasurers' correspondence from 1940-1976 collected and cataloged by Barry L. Isaac, secretary-treasurer in 1975-1976 and first archivist of CSAS. Isaac also collected and cataloged the correspondence of Leslie A. White and other CSAS officers. Isaac's index to the correspondence is located at the beginning of the subseries.

The subseries Other Correspondence contains items from individuals other than CSAS presidents or secretary-treasurers, including elected or appointed officers (e.g., executive board members, student members, bulletin editors, unit news editors, archivists, webmasters, AAA section assembly representatives, etc.). Correspondence from nomination committee members may also appear in this subseries, although results of elections are primarily in Series 1. History and Administrative Files, subseries Rosters of Officers and Nominations.

The correspondence of past presidents is primarily in Series 2. Presidents' Files, and financial reports since the 1980s are in Series 3. Secretary-Treasurers' Reports.

Series 7: Awards, 1975-2011

Scope and Contents: This series consists of materials relating to awards given out by CSAS. These consist of the Leslie A. White Award, which funds student research (established 1983); and the Beth Wilder Dillingham Award, a scholarship for students with dependent children (established 1989); and prizes for the best undergraduate and graduate student papers presented at CSAS annual meetings (established 1971). Flyers announcing application procedures and deadlines appear in annual meeting programs; see Series 6. Publications.

Students' applications, selection committee evaluations, and correspondence regarding donations, distributions, or administration pertaining to award funds are interfiled chronologically by award category. Student papers not selected for prizes have been discarded, but applicants' names and paper titles have been preserved. Because applicants may compete in more than one category, correspondence may be found in one or the other subseries. Additional materials relating to CSAS awards can be found in Series 2. Presidents' Files, particularly in the files of Harriet Ottenheimer. A list of award winners by category is available; ask the archivist for more information.
