Summary:	The papers of Laura Thompson reflect the professional and personal life of an active and pioneering anthropologist. In the 1930s, Thompson began her work in applied anthropology, producing studies of Fiji, Guam and Hawaii intended to aid administrators of economic, educational and political development and pioneering approaches now known as "administrative" and "educational" anthropology. In the 1940s, Thompson applied her skills to the Indian Personality, Education and Administration Research Project, a study of eleven communities of five Native American tribes. From the 1950s until the end of her career, Thompson sought to formulate and demonstrate a theoretical anthropological synthesis of man and culture, while pursuing fieldwork in Iceland and Germany, teaching, and consulting for numerous institutions.

Biographical Note

Laura Thompson (1905-2000) conducted fieldwork in Oceania, the Southwestern United States and Europe; she taught at numerous institutions and served as a consultant for many organizations, including the Naval Government of Guam and the Office of Indian Affairs, throughout her career. Thompson's papers reflect her involvement in each of these activities as well as her desire to formulate a unifying theory of applied anthropology that would address issues including environmentalism and overpopulation.

Scope and Contents

The papers of Laura Thompson reflect the professional and personal life of an active and pioneering anthropologist. In the 1930s, Thompson began her work in applied anthropology, producing studies of Fiji, Guam and Hawaii intended to aid administrators of economic, educational and political development and pioneering approaches now known as "administrative" and "educational" anthropology. In the 1940s, Thompson applied her skills to the Indian Personality, Education and Administration Research Project, a study of eleven communities of five Native American tribes. From the 1950s until the end of her career, Thompson sought to formulate and demonstrate a theoretical anthropological synthesis of man and culture, while pursuing fieldwork in Iceland and Germany, teaching, and consulting for numerous institutions.

Included in this collection are field diaries, numerous manuscripts and lectures, research materials, correspondence, sound recordings and ethnographic photographs. Also included are various subject and index files maintained by Thompson for her many research projects. The collection is particularly rich in unpublished manuscripts that Thompson created from 1950 to the mid 1990s. Manuscript topics include particular field sites, such as Fiji and West Germany, as well as Thompson's critical and theoretical exposition regarding the future of applied anthropology, variously titled "Clinical" and "Holistic Anthropology."

Numerous materials pertaining to Thompson's personal life are also located in the collection, including personal diaries and professional awards, correspondence with friends and family, and personal photographs of Thompson from infancy to old age. Located in Thompson's personal papers are her writings from late in life, in which she addressed aging through her anthropological sensibilities, recorded formative memories from her youth, and projected the future of a world rife with injustice and environmental destruction. A large portion of the Laura Thompson papers include documents from the Indian Personality, Education and Administration (IPEA) Project, initiated by the Office of Indian Affairs and the University of Chicago Committee on Human Development. This investigation of five Native American tribes includes the results of over 1000 psychological studies of native children. Materials included encompass the protocols for and implementation of the project, as well as field reports, psychological tests, correspondence, worker supervision reports and final analyses of findings. Included is a copy of the project's published final report, Personality and Government (1951). The bulk of the records date between 1941and 47; related material spans as late as 1992. Correspondents primarily include project members and consultants, particularly: John Collier, A. I. Hallowell, Maud Hallowell, Royal Hassrick, Robert Havinghurst, Alice Joseph, Bruno Klopfer, Clyde Kluckhohn, Dorothea Leighton, D'Arcy McNickle, Trude Schmidl-Waehner, Heinrich Schultz, Ruth Underhill, and W. Lloyd Warner. The papers of the IPEA Project are restricted in use.

Additional material in the NAA relating to the IPEA Research Project can be found in the following collections: Indian Personality and Administration Research Project Papers, donated by Robert J. Havighurst, and the Dorothea Cross Leighton papers. A list of publications resulting from findings of the project can be found in the Thompson collection accession folder.

Nearly absent from the collection are materials reflecting Thompson's fieldwork in Hawaii, her marriages to Bernhard Tüting and John Collier, and manuscripts of her early publications.

Correspondents in Thompson's papers include: Ruth BENEDICT, Charles W. COLLIER, John COLLIER, Malcolm COLLIER, Cora DUBOIS, Fred EGGAN, Alfred EMERSON, Kenneth EMORY, Frederick V. FIELD, Roland W. FORCE, Derek FREEMAN, Ann Pinson GILL, Peggy GOLDE, A. I. HALLOWELL, Maude HALLOWELL, Royal HASSRICK, Robert HAVINGHURST, Alice JOSEPH, Felix KEESING, Lawrence KELLY, Bruno KLOPFER, Clyde KLUCKHOHN, A. L. KROEBER, Harry S. LADD, Bruno LASKER, Dorothy LEE, Dorothea LEIGHTON, Charles F. LOOMIS, Katherine LOUMALA, Robert H. LOWIE, John R. MACCORMACK, Bronislaw MALINOWSKI, D'Arcy MCNICKLE, Margaret MEAD, Robert REDFIELD, Trude SCHMIDL-WAEHNER, Heinrich SCHULTZ, Leslie SPIER, George D. SPINDLER, Rebecca STEVENSON, Ratu J. L. V. SUKUNA (District Commissioner of Lau), Alfred TOZZER, W. Lloyd WARNER and Alvin WOLFE.

Please note that the contents of the collection and the language and terminology used reflect the context and culture of the time of its creation. As an historical document, its contents may be at odds with contemporary views and terminology and considered offensive today. The information within this collection does not reflect the views of the Smithsonian Institution or National Anthropological Archives, but is available in its original form to facilitate research.

Series 1: FIJI, 1933-1995

1.5 Feet

Scope and Contents: Thompson conducted fieldwork in Kambara, on Lau, Fiji from October 1933 to April 1934 with her first husband, Bernhard Tüting. This series includes incoming and outgoing correspondence, field notes, topical notebooks and manuscripts related to Thompson's investigations. Original manuscripts for Thompson's Fijian Frontier (1940) are not found in the collection. Correspondents include colleagues, grant-awarding institutions and publishing companies. Manuscript materials for Thompson's unpublished book, "Famine Isles," are filed in the order in which they were received. These materials also include correspondence with publishers and research notes directly related to the manuscript. Documents filed as "notes" include both field and research notes; most are undated, but they appear to have been compiled by Thompson as she synthesized the results of her field study. Photographs, which are located at the end of the series, consist primarily of fifty-four prints of twenty-eight different images, eleven of which were published in "Southern Lau, Fiji: An Ethnography" (1940). Many are stamped "credit to B.P. Bishop Museum," and it is presumed that all are from the Bishop Museum. For that reason, the NAA cannot grant reproduction permission.

Arrangement: Materials arranged alphabetically by document type and chronologically therein; notes and photographs arranged alphabetically by subject. Index files and photos placed at end of series. Dates non-inclusive.

Series 2: GERMANY, 1934-1991

Scope and Contents: Between 1934 and 1937, Thompson lived in Germany with her husband, Bernhard Tuting, and his family. After returning to the United States in 1938, Thompson delivered lectures about life in Nazi Germany which are included in this series. Correspondence during this period includes letters from Thompson to her family; few outgoing letters are included. Annotations in pencil on these letters were added at a later date when Thompson edited the material for an intended book based upon her personal letters sent from the field. Manuscript versions of "Letters from Germany" are included with Thompson's Germany manuscripts. Original letters between 1934 and 1935 are absent from the collection. Thompson maintained her interest in German culture throughout her professional life. In 1952 and again in 1960, she returned to Germany to conduct the research which formed the basis for her book-length manuscript about Saxon values. Drafts for the book are filed alphabetically under the heading, "Saxony core values." Related values manuscripts may be found in Series 7. Manuscripts in this series also include papers that Thompson wrote in the 1940s but later edited and may have submitted for the Human Relations Area Files. Notes in this series include index reference files as well as research materials.

Arrangement: Arranged alphabetically by document type, chronologically therein; notes and photographs arranged alphabetically by subject. Dates non-inclusive. Index files, maps and photographs are located at the end of the series.

Series 3: GUAM, 1938-1996

Scope and Contents: Invited by the island's Naval governor to evaluate the local educational sysytem, Laura Thompson first conducted field research in Guam from 1938 to 1939. This study resulted in the publication of Guam and its People (1947). During her stay in Guam, Thompson also traveled to Asia; letters and materials from this trip are located in this series. Thompson maintained her interest in Guam, its administrative problems, and particularly the plights of the Chamorro people. She returned to the island a number of times in her career, including in 1977 and 1987, and maintained personal and professional relationships with colleagues and informants. Professional correspondence is both ingoing and outgoing; personal correspondence is almost entirely composed by Thompson. Correspondents include Thompson's family, colleagues, informants and Guamanian government officials. Thompson's letters to her family during her first trip to the field were later annotated for inclusion in a projected volume of letters from the field. Correspondents Becky Stephenson and her husband, Hiro Kurashina, were close friends as well as colleagues of Thompson's. They became Thompson's literary executors in the mid 1990s and some correspondence between Stephenson and Thompson relates to the publication of Thompson's autobiography, Beyond the Dream. Thompson's field studies include her itinerary, field notes, and an index to her field diary from 1938 and 1939, as well as notes she collected during her trip to the Orient. Few materials in the collection relate to Thompson's seminal work, Guam and Its People.

Arrangement: Materials are ordered alphabetically by document type and chronologically therein; notes and photographs ordered alphabetically by subject. Dates non-inclusive. Photographs are located at the end of the series.

Series 4: INDIAN PERSONALITY, EDUCATION AND ADMINISTRATION RESEARCH PROJECT, 1941-1992

4.25 Feet

Scope and Contents: The Indian Personality, Education and Administration Research Project was supported jointly by the Office of Indian Affairs and the University of Chicago Committee on Human Development. Initiated in 1941 by Indian Affairs Commissioner John Collier, the study investigated eleven communities of five Native American tribes: Hopi, Navaho, Papago, and United Pueblos. The project studied Native Americans as both individuals and as tribal societies, with the aim of increasing the effectiveness of Indian Service policies and programs, improving Indian welfare and developing local autonomy. Thompson coordinated the project; at Chicago, the Indian Education Research Committee, headed by W. Lloyd Warner, was charged with the investigation's scientific work. When the University of Chicago withdrew from the program, they were replaced by the Society for Applied Anthropology. This series reflects much of the work of the IPEA project from its inception in 1941 through its termination in 1947; also included are materials that post-date the study as participants collaborated on investigational analyses. Materials are divided into the following subseries, based upon Thompson's original arrangement of the materials: general correspondence; subject file; interviews; Rorschach monograph; free drawing test; pilot study - Papago Reservation; Hopi materials; publications; and retrospective manuscripts and correspondence. All but the last subseries are restricted. See each subseries section for a description of contents.

Arrangement: Materials divided into subseries based upon document type, alphabetically therein. Correspondence and publications filed chronologically. Dates non-inclusive.

Restrictions: Restricted

4.1: GENERAL CORRESPONDENCE, 1941-72

Scope and Contents: General correspondence includes letters and memos between Thompson and John Collier relating to the administration of the project. Other correspondence includes communication between Thompson and the numerous officials and private individuals involved with the IPEA research project. Primary correspondents in this series include: John Collier (Commissioner of Indian Affairs); W. Lloyd Warner and Robert Havinghurst of the University of Chicago; and staff members Clyde Kluckholn, Alice Joseph and Dorothea Leighton. A portion of the correspondence is between persons other than L. Thompson, but apparently became part of her records due to her position as project coordinator. Topics covered in this series include the formation, organization and daily management of the IPEA, as well as the problems and progress of committees and individual field researchers.

Arrangement: Chronologically arranged.

4.5: FREE DRAWING TEST, 1942-46

Scope and Contents: Included are correspondence, test analyses, memos and reports regarding the administration of the Free Drawing Test. Correspondence is primarily between Thompson and Trude Schmidl-Waehner regarding the latter's analysis of drawing samples. Formal reports on the free drawing test are contained in the folder titled "Memos [and reports, 1942-43]."

Arrangement: Arranged alphabetically by document type.

4.7: HOPI RESEARCH, 1944-1976

Scope and Contents: Unlike the other subseries, the Hopi section is composed both of records maintained by Thompson specifically with the IPEA files and other Hopi research materials collected by Thompson. Since many if not all of these directly relate to the IPEA's work with the Hopi, they were placed in this series. Included in this subseries are correspondence with John Collier and D'Arcy McNickle; field, research and lecture notes; manuscripts and publications; maps; photographs; and papers relating to Thompson's Hopi publications. Hopi material is also found in other IPEA subject files.

Series 5: ICELAND, 1952-1981

2 Feet

Scope and Contents: Papers in this series originated from Thompson's two field trips to Iceland in 1952 and 1960. Included are field diaries and interviews, original field notes, research notes, and Thompson's 1960 pilot study report of Icelandic values. This series also includes many manuscripts based upon Thompson's Icelandic studies and photographs taken in the field. Thompson never published any materials based upon this research. Also see Series 7 for more materials relating to Thompson's core values project. Diaries from 1952 include research notes, diary entries and interviews. Between her two field trips, Thompson kept touch with her informant and Icelandic host, Anna Gudmundsdottir. Thompson's correspondent Ann Pinson Gill was a student pursuing her graduate research in a rural township in northern Iceland. Included is her 1977 Ph.D. dissertation. One letter from Gill remains restricted. This series includes the only personal letters between Thompson and her second husband, John Collier, found in the collection.

Arrangement: Materials ordered alphabetically by document type and chronologically therein; notes and photographs arranged alphabetically. Index files and photographs placed at end of series.

Series 6: INSTITUTE OF HUMAN VALUES, 1973-1981

Scope and Contents: These materials encompass Thompson's consulting work and participation in conferences for the Institute of Human Values. Thompson served as a member of the advisory board for the Institute and participated in all four meetings held by the organization (1976 to 1978 and 1981). The bulk of correspondence in the series is with John R. MacCormack, Director of the Institute. Also included are papers delivered at conferences and those published in Humanitas, the journal in which the Institute published its conference proceedings.

Arrangement: Materials ordered chronologically.

Series 7: MANUSCRIPTS AND RESEARCH, 1935-1993

11 Feet

Scope and Contents: These materials encompass research materials and manuscripts that relate to Thompson's anthropological work, but do not relate specifically to any particular research site. Included are short papers as well as book-length manuscripts. A number of planned texts that were never published are included in this series. Of particular interest is Thompson's "Holistic Anthropology," which represents her synthesis of anthropological theory. Correspondence relating to manuscripts and research topics are also included in this series.

Arrangement: Materials arranged in subseries by document type.

7.1: A: RESEARCH-ORIENTED MANUSCRIPTS AND NOTES, 1935-1992.

Scope and Contents: These papers include unpublished manuscripts for articles, books and lectures. Research and correspondence related to specific projects are included with manuscripts. Course materials and photographs are also located in this subseries. Book projects follow article drafts and research materials. Research papers relating to "Holistic Anthropology" are filed with the manuscript. Documents filed with the core values project may overlap with Thompson's studies of Iceland and Germany; because of the broad nature of Thompson's core values work, however, these materials are included in this series. "Readings in Unified Anthropology" was a collaborative project developed and edited by Thompson.

Arrangement: Arranged chronologically; materials for large projects filed under project title at end of subseries.
