Scope and Contents

The collection consists of two blueprint copies of drawings illustrating rock carvings and paintings at two sites near Hurley, Mexico. The drawings give the position of the petroglyphs on the rocks as well as their color and design. The first drawing is captioned: "The stone-drawings (partly chiseled with flintstone, partly painted with red-brown paint) south of the excavation, northwest of Hurley, New Mexico." The second is captioned, "All the figures are painted on the lower side of a great rock plate, as well as on several smaller rocks, lying under the above mentioned rock-plate."

Please note that the contents of the collection and the language and terminology used reflect the context and culture of the time of its creation. As an historical document, its contents may be at odds with contemporary views and terminology and considered offensive today. The information within this collection does not reflect the views of the Smithsonian Institution or National Anthropological Archives, but is available in its original form to facilitate research.
