Sent to the archives from the anthropology library, May 1987.

Provenance

Previously titled "Correspondence."

Citation

Manuscript 7445, National Anthropological Archives, Smithsonian Institution

Scope and Contents

The material represents an exchange between Holmes and J. W. Hayes, of Craggs, Essex, England, over the latter's inquiry concerning certain clay tools, in Hayes' description spoken as being mushroom-shaped. A photograph shows the items as being somewhat spool-shaped. They are referred to as being "pressers" for ceramic work.
