Biographical / Historical

Herbert William Krieger joined the staff of the United States National Museum's Department of Anthropology as assistant curator of ethnology in 1924, and he became curator of ethnology in 1925. In spite of his position, much of his field work was carried out in archaeology. In 1927, for the Bureau of American Ethnology, he examined the feasibility of restoring Old Kasaan on Prince of Wales Island, Alaska, and carried out archaeological reconnaissance along the Columbia River. In the following year, he continued reconnaissance work, first along the middle Yukon River and then, again, along the Columbia. In the former area, he also collected a few random notes on living Athapascan Indians and in both areas he carried out several excavations.

In 1934, for the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the Public Works Administration, he carried out salvage archaeological work near Bonneville, Oregon. As a pastime, during the 1930s, he carried out reconnaissance along the lower Potomac River. Krieger's major work, however, lay to the south among the problems of Caribbean archeology. Between 1928 and 1937 and from 1947 to 1952, he concerned himself with sites visited by Columbus and attempts to plot areas previously occupied by the Arawak, Carib, and other tribes.

His studies involved examinations of both historic and prehistoric Spanish and Indian settlements in Haiti, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, the Virgin Islands, and the Bahamas. Based on these, he published several articles and books, including Archeological and Historical Investigations in Samana, Dominican Republic, United States National Museum Bulletin 156, 1931, and Aboriginal Indian Pottery of the Dominican Republic, United States National Museum Bulletin 156, 1931. He was also a participant in several conferences concerned with the archaeology, ethnology, and history of the Caribbean area.

In addition to his field work and administrative duties as head of the Division of Ethnology, Krieger worked with the Museum's ethnological collections and published several articles based on them. He also became involved in the renovation of the division's public areas so that "the antiquated and overcrowded exhibits should be replaced by modern exhibits in which art and science are blended". Much of the effort for this was carried out by Krieger's associate curator John Canfield Ewers.

Having a special interest in the Philippines and western Oceania that grew from his early service as a teacher in Manila, Krieger also produced studies of the people of the Philippines and the islands of the western Pacific for the Smithsonian's War Background Studies series during World War II. He also worked on a volume "The Islands of New Japan, " but it was never published.

Scope and Contents

These papers reflect the professional life of Herbert William Krieger (b. 1889), archaeologist and curator of the Division of Ethnology for the former United States National Museum of the Smithsonian Institution. Included are correspondence, field notebooks, notes, administrative material, manuscripts of writings, printed matter, sketches, maps, photographs and other documents that cover the period from 1925 to 1957.

The bulk of the material concerns Krieger's archaeological work in the West Indies, primarily the Dominican Republic, where he researched intermittently from 1938 to 1953. There is also material in the collection on Krieger's work in Southeastern and Central Alaska where he was involved with the restoration and reconstruction of the Kansa National Monument from 1926 to 1927. Material concerning the salvage archaeology performed on the Columbia River in Washington and Oregon, particularly in the area of the construction site of the Bonneville Dam, is included in the collection. Also included is work on two War Background Studies publications, one on the peoples of the Philippines, the other on the islands of the Western Pacific. The collection additionally contains Krieger's office files and collected correspondence of scholars and informants used for reference purposes.

Not represented in the collection is any phase of Krieger's personal life, nor is there any material reflecting his life prior to or since his association with the Museum.

Among correspondents whose letters are included are Franz BOAS, C. U. CLARK, John COLLIER, L. S. CRESSMAN, Frances DENSMORE, Philip DRUCKER, John EWERS, Jesse W. FEWKES, Melville HERSKOVITS, William H. HOLMES, Walter HOUGH, Neil M. JUDD, A. L. KROEBER, Otis MASON, Frank M. SETZLER, Herbert J. SPINDEN, T. D. STEWART, Matthew STIRLING, William Duncan STRONG, T. T. WATERMAN, Waldo WEDEL, Alexander WETMORE, and Clark WISSLER.

Please note that the contents of the collection and the language and terminology used reflect the context and culture of the time of its creation. As an historical document, its contents may be at odds with contemporary views and terminology and considered offensive today. The information within this collection does not reflect the views of the Smithsonian Institution or National Anthropological Archives, but is available in its original form to facilitate research.

Series 3: COLLECTED CORRESPONDENCE USED FOR REFERENCE PURPOSES, 1892-1957

Scope and Contents: Arranged alphabetically by correspondent's name and thereunder in chronological order.

A collection of the correspondence of several prominent scholars, these were probably used by Krieger for reference purposes. Letters deal with a broad range of subjects, including instructions for the construction of sod houses and a report by Franz Boas on the importance of linguistics courses to anthropologists.

Similar collections of material are found in the series relating to the Columbia River region and the West Indies.

Series 5: MATERIAL RELATING TO SOUTHEAST AND CENTRAL ALASKA, 1926-1927

Scope and Contents: Arranged by type of material.

Notes, notebooks, field notes, maps, drafts of articles and transcripts of legends are all included. Most of the material was collected during the reconstruction and restoration at Old Kasaan National Monument. The notes and notebooks include general ethnographic data; sketches of Tsimshian, Haida, and Tlingit petroglyphs; and, information regarding house construction. The drafts of the articles are entitled "Indian Villages of Southeast Alaska" and the "Archeology of Central Alaska".

Series 6: MATERIAL CONCERNING THE COLUMBIA RIVER REGION, 1927-1955

Scope and Contents: Arranged by physical type.

Correspondence, field notebooks, notes, archeological lists, sketches, manuscript material, maps and printed matter. Part of this project was funded under the National Industrial Recovery Act and carried out for the Indian Field Service, U. S. Department of the Interior. Work was done primarily from 1933-1935 as salvage archeology prior to the construction of the Bonneville Dam. Correspondence includes that of local informants offering information on sites and artifacts as well as a classification for collected correspondence used as references. Notebooks include an excavation diary and geology notebook by a student helper, Wayne Felts; notes sent to the Smithsonian describing collections of artifacts and specimens by H. S. Hanling; and Krieger's own sketches and notes on artifacts and petroglyphs. Manuscripts of writings encompass drafts of reports of work done and a rough draft of "Salvaging of Early Cultural Remains in the Valley of the Lower Columbia" among others. Maps cover diagrams of Wakemap Mound, Bradford Island and pertinent stretches of the Columbia. Clippings regarding artifacts found and theories of antiquity as well as copies of bills passed by Congress in relation to Bonneville Salvage are among the material included in the printed matter.

Series 7: MANUSCRIPTS AND NOTES ON THE ISLANDS OF THE WESTERN PACIFIC, 1943

Scope and Contents: Arranged by area and thereunder alphabetically by island group. The entire series is composed of rough drafts and carbon copies of manuscripts of writings pertaining to a general description of the island groups represented. Material was compiled for the Smithsonian's War Background Studies and was published as ISLAND PEOPLES OF THE WESTERN PACIFIC, MICRONESIA AND MELANESIA, WBS #16. The information about the islands is of a very general nature, presenting a broad overview of geography, climate, and native cultures. There is a portion dealing with the pattern of Japanese Island expansion and the islands of New Japan, reflecting the interest with World War II concerns. The folders of printed matter are primarily news clippings relating to the war in the Pacific.

Series 9: MATERIAL CONCERNING THE WEST INDIES, 1938-1953

Scope and Contents: Arranged by physical type or geographical area.

Includes correspondence, street addresses of informants and friends, notebooks, notes, sketches, exhibit material, financial records, specimen reports, artifactual drawings, and manuscripts of writings. Most of the material deals with the Dominican Republic and a rough draft of ABORIGINAL INDIAN POTTERY OF THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC is included. The writings concerning the general area include such things as "Flint Chipping in the Greater Antilles," and descriptions of Arawak cultural traits. A relatively large amount of the material concerning the Bahamas is devoted to Columbus' background and voyages. Printed matter includes maps, reprints, clippings and unidentified handwritten notes. There is a predominance of material relating to Columbus in the printed matter.

Series 12: PHOTOGRAPHS, ?-1957

5 Linear feet

Arrangement: Arranged by area and, thereunder, by subject categories. Negatives have not been matched with originals and have been placed unarranged at the end of the series.

Scope and Contents: The majority are Krieger's own shots but many have been collected from the U.S.N.M., the Bureau of American Ethnology, and other sources. Half of the series is composed of prints of the West Indies, with the Dominican Republic being the most heavily represented. Subject categories include artifacts, sites, habitations, and people. Of particular note in the miscellaneous photographs are the habitations, which include a good variety of selected prints, and petroglyphs, although the locations of many are not identified.
