Biographical Note

The National Anthropological Archives began as the archives of the Bureau of American Ethnology and, in 1965, became the archives of the Smithsonian Office of Anthropology. The archives is now under the administration of the Department of Anthropology in the National Museum of Natural History. The current name was adopted in 1968.

Scope and Contents

Included are correspondence and administrative records. Many of the documents concern special projects, including the Native American Cultural Resources Training Program, accessions, routine reference activities, and other work.

Please note that the contents of the collection and the language and terminology used reflect the context and culture of the time of its creation. As an historical document, its contents may be at odds with contemporary views and terminology and considered offensive today. The information within this collection does not reflect the views of the Smithsonian Institution or National Anthropological Archives, but is available in its original form to facilitate research.
