Collection Overview

Repository:	Archives Center, National Museum of American History
Title:	Leo H. Baekeland Papers
Date:	1976 1863 - 1968
Identifier:	NMAH.AC.0005
Creator:	Baekeland, L. H. (Leo Hendrik), 1863-1944
Extent:	15 Cubic feet (49 boxes)
Language:	English .
Summary:	The papers document Leo H. Baekeland, a Belgian born chemist who invented Velox photographic paper (1893) and Bakelite (1907), an inexpensive, nonflammable, versatile plastic. The papers include student notebooks; private laboratory notebooks and journals; commercial laboratory notes; diaries; patents; technical papers; biographies; newspaper clippings; maps; graphs; blueprints; account books; batch books; formula books; order books; photographs; and correspondence regarding Baekeland, 1887-1943.

Administrative Information

Acquisition Information

The bulk of the collection was donated to the National Museum of American History's Division of Physical Sciences in November, 1981, by Celine Karraker, Leo H. Baekeland's granddaughter.

Provenance

The materials were on temporary loan to the Museum since May, 1976. The first accession included eighteen boxes of papers and correspondence and eighteen boxes of photographs and negatives. Boxes were transferred to the Archives Center in April 1983 and one additional box was transferred in March 1984.

Separated Materials

The National Museum of American History, Division Medicine and Science has several artifacts associated with Baekeland including the original "Bakalizer" the apparatus in which Bakelite was first made. See accession numbers: 1977.0368; 1979.1179; 1981.0976; 1982.0034; 1983.0524; 1984.0138.

Collection items available for reproduction, but the Archives Center makes no guarantees concerning copyright restrictions. Other intellectual property rights may apply. Archives Center cost-recovery and use fees may apply when requesting reproductions.

Accruals

Sixty-two of Leo H. Baekeland's personal diaries were donated directly to the Archives Center by Mrs. Karraker in subsequent installments between 1984-1995.

Biographical / Historical

Leo Hendrik Baekeland was an industrial chemist famous for his invention of Bakelite, the first moldable synthetic polymer, and for his invention of Velox photographic paper. Baekeland's career as an inventor and innovator was punctuated by an urge to improve existing technologies and a willingness to experiment both meticulously and daringly. Born in Ghent, Belgium in 1863, Baekeland was a distinguished chemistry student and became a young professor at the University of Ghent. He had a long standing interest in photography and sought to further photographic technology with his expertise in chemistry. In 1887 he obtained his first patent for a dry plate which contained its own developer and could be developed in a tray of water. With the support of a business partner/faculty associate, Jules Guequier, he formed a company named Baekeland et Cie to produce the plate, but the venture failed due to lack of capital.

On August 8, 1889, he married Celine Swarts, daughter of his academic mentor Theodore Swarts, Dean of the Faculty of Sciences at the University of Ghent. After his wedding he travelled to different countries using a traveling scholarship he had been awarded two years previously. His travels ended in the United States where he was offered a job researching chemical problems associated with manufacturing bromide papers and films with A. and H.T. Anthony and Company, a photographic supply producer. Leo and Celine Baekeland had three children: George, Nina and Jenny (1890-1895).

He left Anthony and Company in 1891 to be a consulting chemist. During that time he invented a photographic print paper using silver chloride which could be developed in artificial light instead of sunlight and thus offered more flexibility and consistency to photographers. In 1893, with financial support from Leonard Jacobi, a scrap metal dealer from San Francisco, he formed the Nepera Chemical Company in Yonkers, New York, to manufacture "gaslight" paper under the trade name Velox. The paper became quite popular and the company expanded its operations after its first three years. Finally, George Eastman bought the company for a reported $750,000 which afforded Baekeland the time to conduct his own research in a laboratory he set up on his estate, "Snug Rock," in Yonkers.

Baekeland worked on problems of electrolysis of salt and the production of synthetic resins. He was hired as a consultant to work with Clinton P. Townsend to perfect Townsend's patented electrolytic cell. Baekeland's work there contributed to the success of the Hooke Electrochemical Company which began in operations in Niagara Falls in 1905.

Simultaneously, in 1902 Baekeland began researching reactions of phenol and formaldehyde, and by 1907 was able to control the reactions and produce a moldable plastic (oxybenzylmethylenglycolanhydride) which he named Bakelite. Although the process was not perfected for another couple of years, Baekeland applied for a patent for Bakelite right away. He announced his discovery to the scientific community in 1909, and in 1910 formed the General Bakelite Company. Bakelite was a thermosetting resin that, unlike Celluloid became permanently solid when heated. It was virtually impervious to heat, acids, or caustic substances. It could be molded into a wide variety of shapes and was an excellent electric insulator that came to replace hard rubber and amber for electrical and industrial applications. It was also suitable for a wide variety of consumer products such as billiard balls, jewelry, pot handles, telephones, toasters, electric plugs, and airplane instrument knobs. Two companies challenged Bakelite with significant competition, Condensite Corporation of America and Redmanol Chemical Products Company. Bakelite finally merged with these two companies in 1922 to become the Bakelite Corporation. Union Carbide finally bought the corporation in 1939.

Baekeland sustained his interest in photography by taking numerous photographs throughout his lifetime. He also devoted much of his spare time to professional societies and received various honorary degrees and awards such as the Perkin Medal. He had several hobbies such as boating, wine and beer making, and, exotic plants. He also traveled extensively throughout the world, which is documented in his diaries and photographs.

Baekeland spent his final years mostly in his Coconut Grove, Florida home where he became increasingly eccentric until his mind failed him and he was institutionalized. He died in 1943 at the age of eighty.

Scope and Content: Baekeland documented his life prolifically through diaries, laboratory notebooks, photographs, and correspondence. These constitute the bulk of the collection. The Bakelite company history is also incompletely documented in this collection through Baekeland's correspondence, the commercial laboratory notebooks, and some company ledgers.

Container Listing

Series 1: Reference Materials, 1863-1968 and undated

Scope and Contents: This series is divided into three subseries: Subseries 1.1: Biographical, 1880-1965; Subseries 1.2: Bakelite Company, 1910-1961; and Subseries 1.3: Related Interests, 1863-1968 and undated. The materials are generally arranged in chronological order.

Subseries 1.1: Biographical, 1880-1965, contains materials about Baekeland were written both while he was alive and after his death. Most of them were published in magazines, newspapers, and biographical dictionaries. Included are also identification materials such as a passport, visas, and naturalization papers. There is a photocopy of the 1968 biographical Master's thesis on Baekeland by Carl Kaufmann, and materials related to his research. Kaufmann was married to Baekeland's daughter Nina's stepdaughter. He gained access to many of Baekeland's papers before they were donated to the museum, and he located his diaries and notebooks through Baekeland's secretary Gertrude Gould. Most of the materials are in English, but there are also biographies in French, Flemish, German, and Japanese.

Subseries 1.2: Baekeland Company, 1910-1961, includes some advertising material from Bakelite, histories of the Bakelite and the Bakelite Company, and histories of the European Bakelite companies, Bakelite Limited and Bakelite Gesellschaft.

Subseries 1.3: Related Interests, 1863-1968 and undated, contains mostly materials that Baekeland collected, with particular emphasis on plastics, chemistry, and photography. (The materials that date from after Baekeland's death were presumably gathered by his son George, and/or by biographer Carl Kaufmann while researching.) There are also newspaper clippings on various topics, legal materials, blueprint drawings of his Florida property "The Anchorage," and magazines in which Celine Baekeland published her artwork. These materials support topics covered in the correspondence series.

Series 2: Published and Unpublished Writings (by Leo H. Baekeland), 1884-1945

Scope and Contents: This series contains published and unpublished writings by Leo H. Baekeland. Baekeland published prolifically throughout his career on various topics of interest and expertise including chemistry, plastics, and photography. Before moving to the United States he published and wrote scholarly studies in French and in Flemish. He published a book in 1907 documenting his family's automobile trip through Europe which includes extensive photographs. There is also one folder of writings by Baekeland's wife Celine. Baekeland also published essays on patent law reform which are found in the series dealing with patents.

Series 3: Correspondence, 1888-1963

Scope and Contents: This series is divided into four subseries: Subseries 3.1: Personal Correspondence, 1916-1943; Subseries 3.2: Charitable Donations, 1916 -938; Subseries 3.3: Family Correspondence, 1888-1963; and Subseries 3.4: Clubs and Associations: 1916-1943.

Business correspondence can be found with the Bakelite Company series and contains Baekeland's correspondence beginning with letters between him and his wife while they lived in Belgium, and ending with the years before he died. Baekeland kept carbon copies of his out going correspondence when he began his business, and much of his in coming correspondence has handwritten notes on it indicating his replies, which were probably transcribed by his secretary.

Subseries 3.1: Personal Correspondence, 1916 -1943, contains correspondence to and from Baekeland mostly from friends and professional associates. The majority of the correspondence is from the early 1920s through the late 1930s with few items from pre 1920. The letters are predominantly in English as Baekeland made and maintained most of his adult contacts after moving to the United States.

Subseries 3.2: Charitable Donations, 1916-1938, Aside from the various clubs and associations that Baekeland supported through his membership, he also contributed money to many charities and other organizations. His donations were not limited to those found in the container listing.

Subseries 3.3: Family Correspondence, 1888-1963, contains correspondence between Baekeland and his wife Celine before they were married, and while he was in the United States and she remained in Belgium until 1892. Until 1905 most of the letters are in French, but once they were settled in the United States they communicated in English. The correspondence between Baekeland and his children Nina and George seems to be from 1905 when he travelled abroad. Celine (nickname Bon Bon) Baekeland's personal correspondence related to theosophy and with her family members is also well represented. Otherwise most of the family correspondence is from after Baekeland's death. There is correspondence from Celine and Leo Baekeland's families in Belgium, some in French, some in Flemish, and correspondence related to some of the family's properties, such as "The Anchorage" in Florida, and the "Craggs" in New York. There is also some related correspondence issued by Gertrude Bidwell Gould, Baekeland's personal secretary after his death.

Subseries 3.4: Clubs and Associations, 1916-1943, Leo Baekeland was a member or honorary member of many clubs, associations, societies, and had numerous group affiliations. This majority of the material is from the mid 1920s through the late 1930s. This series reveals many of his interests, as well as organizations to which he was offered membership but declined.

Notes: Inscription on flyleaf: "I / Journal of / Dr. L.H. Baekeland / Yonkers, NY [sic] / April 3, 1907 / to Jan. 23, 1908." The diary details Baekeland's daily activities. He writes often of his visits and discussions, and the subjects of correspondence he has written and received. It sheds light on the use and distance of travel by automobile in the early twentieth century. In the notes, Baekeland explains increasing time spent in the laboratory at the end of 1907 into 1908. Topic: Laboratories Automobiles -- 1900-1910 Tourism Family -- 20th century Place: Yonkers (N.Y.) -- 1900-1910 Genre/Form: Biographies Diaries -- 20th century
