Administrative Information

Acquisition Information

The Morrisons donated this collection of audiocassettes, transcripts, and photographs to the National Museum of American History Archives Center in 1989.

Processing Information

Processed by Barbara Humphrys, archivist, 1991, and revised by Wendy Shay, archivist, 1998.

Preferred Citation

Joan and Robert K. Morrison Collection, 1983-1987, Archives Center, National Museum of American History.

Restrictions

Collection is open for research.

Tape recordings not available for playback until researcher copies are made; researchers must use transcripts until then.

Conditions Governing Use

Collection items available for reproduction, but the Archives Center makes no guarantees concerning copyright restrictions. Other intellectual property rights may apply. Archives Center cost-recovery and use fees may apply when requesting reproductions.

Some original interviews have restrictions; these have been withheld by the Morrisons until they can get clearances from the interviewees.

Biographical / Historical

In 1985, Joan Morrison (1922-2010) and her son Robert conducted approximately 100 oral history interviews with a diverse group of Americans about their experiences in the civil rights and peace movements of the 1960s. They also collected photographs of each of their interviewees—one taken during the 1960s and others taken at the time of the interview. Portions of fifty-nine of those interviews were published in their 1987 book, From Camelot to Kent State: The Sixties Experience in the Words of Those Who Lived It (Times Books). Some of the new photographs, which were taken by Barbara T. Beirne, were exhibited at The New School in 1989.

The interviewees include civil rights activists, anti-war activists, Vietnam War soldiers, Gold Star mothers, Peace Corps members, Weathermen, black leaders, and counter culture figures. Some of the narrators are members of the rank-and-file, others played leading roles. The in-depth interviews focus on three main questions: 1) What motivated you to act as you did in the Sixties? 2) What actions did you take and what were the results? 3) How did your experiences in the Sixties affect the way your life has developed since then?

Source Information taken from memo to National Museum of American History Collections Committee.

Scope and Contents

The collection is comprised of 139 audiocassettes (original copies only), 80 transcripts and tape summaries, and photographs (including some negatives). The transcripts and photographs also exist in single copies only, but they may be used with care by researchers.
