Biographical / Historical

The Jazz Oral History Collection comprises two oral history interviews about Duke Ellington and his Orchestra.

One interview is with Leonard Feather (1914-1994), noted jazz critic, record producer, and composer. Born in England, Feather became an ardent fan of jazz by listening to recordings. The first time he saw Ellington perform live was in 1933 at the Palladium in London. Feather made his first trip to the United States in 1935 and through music critic and record producer John Hammond he met many of the leading musicians, producers, and concert promoters active in the American jazz scene. Feather was hired by Ellington in 1942 to do publicity and became part of what Feather referred to as “the Ellington family.” Feather worked with Mercer Ellington as well and throughout the years he maintained an active involvement and friendship with Ellington.

A shorter interview with drummer Sam Woodyard (1925-1988) is poorly recorded and consequently it is difficult to hear and understand Woodyard’s responses to the questions. Sam Woodyard was a drummer with the Ellington Orchestra from 1955 through 1966.

RTC 1: Side A Running Time: 30:00

• Discusses first visits in New York. • Born and raised in London; became jazz fan by listening to records. • Met Ellington in Chicago for the first time through Irving Mills' cousin; summer of 1936 Ellington was playing there and Feather went back stage and meant him Ellington's reputation in England when Feather was still living in England --more so than in the United States; more jazz publications in the early 1930s in Europe than in United States. • Feels that Ellington did not gain the save level of acceptance as a great artist in United States because of race. Same issues didn't apply in UK. • First Ellington records- Black and Tan, The Mooch, Creole Love Call • Check and Double Check film Ellington demeaned by being secondary to white Amos and Andy, but at least Ellington got to perform music on screen. • First saw Ellington at Palladium in 1933 in London with Ivie Anderson, Snake Hips Tucker --was in awe of the music. • Why did Feather come to the US in 1935? Came on a visit largely because of the music; had met John Hammond; took the ship the Normandy; met many people through John Hammond. • Went on road with Louis Armstrong and experienced Jim Crow America Hired by Ellington in 1942 to do publicity and promotion; became part of the Ellington family. • Black, Brown, and Beige • Ellington and Strayhorn work habits. • Morale problems in Ellington Orchestra circa 1943.

RTC 1: Side B (Note: recording starts at 2:00 minute) Running Time: 28:00

• Morale issues (continued) • Discipline problems. • Ellington put up with problems because he knew what he wanted musically. • Orchestra musicianship and discipline began to fall apart by the end of Ellington's life, particularly after Strayhorn died. • Johnny Hodges unhappiness with the band. • Irving Mills --thoughts and memories by Leonard Feather. • Feather never went to Cotton Club because blacks weren't allowed in the audience. • Many New York jazz clubs were whites only until the early 1940s. • Ellington the pragmatist. • Meeting Helen Oakley (Dance)- produced Ellington small group sessions for Irving Mills and Ellington. • Ellington income sources during -- records provided the smaller amount because of poor jazz record sales; composing income subsidized the band. • Strayhorn --met him as part of the Ellington "family"; worked with Strayhorn on a blues piano book for Robbins Music; Strayhorn was a delight and a total genius.

RTC 2: Side A Running Time: 30:00

- Strayhorn (continued) • Esquire Stars recording (?) • Ellington and Strayhorn working relationship; why Strayhorn didn't perform as pianist for the orchestra more. • Ellington/Strayhorn - question about composing credits. • Second stint in 1950 —about 1952 with Ellington at Tempo Music and then a small record company with Mercer called Mercer Records; became a friend of Mercer's. • Ellington/Mercer relationship. • Tempo Music Company.

RTC 2: Side B (starts 2:00 minutes in) Running Time: 28:00

- Mercer Records • Irving Townsend/Ellington relationship beginning in 1956. • Feather pieces that ended up in the Ellington Orchestra repertoire. • John Hammond/Ellington relationship. • Ellington as a man of contradictions. • Feather's move to Los Angeles and effect on relationship with Ellington. • Memories of Johnny Hodges leaving the Ellington Orchestra. • Integrating the Ellington Orchestra —1951 Louis Bellson joins. • Norman Granz/Ellington relationship. • Joe Glaser booked Ellington, but an Armstrong man first and forever. • Race as it shaped Ellington's career and music. • Ellington as a significant 20th century musical figure.

Leonard Feather Interview, 6 October 1990

RTC 3: Side A Running Time: 20:00

- Feather's opinion of Ellington's portrayal in books, documentaries, and historical record. • Memories of band rehearsals. • Jimmy Hamilton compositions for the band. • Joe Morgan and Ellington. • Ellington and religion --Feather's observations. • Did Ellington open up to anyone? A couple of times let façade down with Feather; probably with Ruth as well, maybe Strayhorn. • Ellington's drinking, heavy during his twenties, much less so as he aged; didn't drink much when Feather knew him. • Did Feather's experience having grown up Jewish influence his attitude toward race? • Making a living as a jazz critic in the late 1930s --not possible, Feather did many other jazz-related jobs like writing music, producing records, publicity, etc. • People influenced by Ellington --just about every major composer to come along since Ellington's heyday.

Subseries 1.2: Sam Woodyard Interview, 30 May 1988-31 May 1988

Box 1

Interviewed by Patricia Willard, Sam Woodyard discusses his life and his time in the Ellington Orchestra. Poor sound quality makes it impossible to hear Mr. Woodyard's answers and comments throughout most of the interview.
