Administrative Information

Acquisition Information

Collection donated by a museum in Denmark, circa 1970s.

Provenance

Photographs originally acquired in the 1970s as a gift from a museum in Denmark, and were collected by David Haberstick for the Division of Photographic History, National Museum of American History and later transferred to the Division of Community Life, now the Division of Home and Community Life in July, 1985. The collection was subsequently transferred to the Archives Center at an unknown date.

Processing Information

Processed by David Haberstick, archivist, and Maria Timm (volunteer), December 2, 1998. Updated by Lydia Chiro (intern) and Allyssa Tidwell (intern), August 2011; supervised by Alison Oswald, archivist.

Original storage for this collection was in paper envelopes, generally one per film. These envelopes were removed and discarded at various times while this collection has been in the custody of the National Museum of American History. The envelopes bore pencilled numbers whose function is unknown; these numbers are transcribed at the end of each film entry; occasionally there was no number on the envelope or it has been lost.

Scope and Contents

The collection contains primarily black-and-white silver gelatin photographic prints, produced by film studios and distributors for advertising and theater lobby display purposes. The films are mostly American, although the collection includes some European and Japanese films. Many prints were used for display purposes and have tack-holes in the corners. Some are in poor condition with tears, creases and folds; others are in excellent condition. Some images occur as glossy color photomechanical prints, but hand-tinted black-and-white prints are also included. There are often duplicate prints. Many prints are embossed or blind-stamped ASTATENS FILMCENSUR, with a date date. Some films include small booklets in Danish that lists the major actors and the plot of the movie. The collection has been divided into two series.

Series 1, Film Stills, is arranged alphabetically by film title, one motion picture per folder. The subjects range from pre-World War I silent films to comedies with Mickey Rooney, and European romances.

Series 2, Unidentified Film Stills, contains stills from films that can not be identified by archivists within the Archives Center. The series also contains a catalog that allows one to purchase books, pamphlets, programs, periodicals, and photographs of various films, actors, and directors.
