Terms Governing Use and Reproduction

Collection items available for reproduction, but the Archives Center makes no guarantees concerning copyright restrictions. Other intellectual property rights may apply. Archives Center cost-recovery and use fees may apply when requesting reproductions.

Accruals

The Society for Industrial Archeology (SIA) Records continue to grow as files generated by SIA officers and members are retired from active use and sent to the Archives Center.

The Archives Center only accepts materials documenting the functions of SIA as a professional organization. Examples of materials accepted include correspondence, conference programs, papers delivered at conference sessions, final reports, committee files, and photographs. We are not accepting digital records or personal papers that relate to non-SIA activities. For example, letters of recommendation and books and articles published by SIA members are not accepted.

When transferring records to the Archives Center, all records must be in labeled file folders. Please remove materials from hanging folders, binders, envelopes, and comb bindings, and remove binder clips from the records. Create a list of the folder titles in each box. Be sure that the list matches the order of the folders in the boxes.

Email the list of folder titles to the Archives Center and staff will schedule a time to pick-up the records or coordinate shipment. Please contact the Archives Center prior to sending your donation at 202-633-3270 or archivescenter@si.edu.

The Society for Industrial Technology (SIA) continues to transfer records to the Archives Center. Addenda were received from David Engman, January 26, 2002; David R. Starbuck, Ph.D, September 2, 2003; the Ohio Historical Society, through David Simmons, April 1, 2003; Ted Sande, December 2015; Justin M. Spivey in 2016; and Helena Wright in 2021.

Historical Note

The roots of the Society for Industrial Archeology can be traced back to a seminar on industrial archeology held at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C, on April 11, 1967. Kenneth Hudson, the prominent British archeologist, was the featured speaker and main attraction. More than 30 people attended this day-long seminar, including state and federal government officials involved in historic preservation; museum professionals from the Smithsonian, other technology museums, and a handful of historic sites and parks; and representatives of several engineering societies. The sessions concentrated on what was being done in Great Britain and on the Continent to promote the study of industrial archeology, and what needed to be done in the United States. This seminar planted the seeds for the eventual founding of the SIA, seeds which germinated for more than four years before bearing fruit.

The SIA was officially born at the conference held at the Smithsonian Institution on October 16, 1971. Paul E. Rivard, then director of the Old Slater Mill Museum, proposed a meeting to develop means to improve the exchange of ideas and information among people working in the "new" field of industrial archeology. Ted Sande, Philadelphia architect and doctoral student at the University of Pennsylvania, and Robert M. Vogel, curator of mechanical and civil engineering, Smithsonian Institution, organized the meeting. Nearly 50 people involved in the field attended this all-day conference, including architectural historians, historical archeologists, historians of technology, museologists, and preservationists. They came from museums, state and federal agencies, universities, and historical societies (see the appendix for a list of attendees). The same interesting collection of individuals, institutions, and interests remain well-represented in the SIA to this day.
