Summary:	George Sidney (1916-2002) was a film director during the Golden Age of Hollywood filmmaking (1927-1954). He spent the longest period of his career at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer (MGM) until the 1950s. He later produced and directed films for Columbia Pictures and Paramount Pictures. He was a president of the Directors Guild of America and an avid photographer. He was the recipient of three awards from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences (Oscar). The collection consists of photographs, photographic negatives, personal and business materials, and film. The collection also contains material created by George Sidney's uncle, George Sidney, vaudevillian and motion picture actor.

Biographical / Historical

George E. Sidney was born in New York, New York on October 4th, 1916 into a show business family. His father Louis K. Sidney (birth surname Kronowith) (1891-1958) was a Broadway producer, actor-manager, and one of the vice-presidents of Loew's Incorporated. Sidney's mother, Hazael Mooney (?-1969), was a vaudeville performer, part of a sister act known as The Mooney Sisters. She was a native New Yorker, daughter of prominent New York City attorney Henry Mooney. She and Louis were married at her home, 12 West 109th Street, New York. Another residence was 179 West 63rd Street.

Louis K. Sidney began working for Loew's Incorporated in 1923. He managed theatres in Denver, Pittsburgh, Toledo, Dayton, and New York. Later he was in charge of stage productions for the theatre circuit. He was in charge of MGM's East Coast film production facility in New York. He and Hazael followed son George to Los Angeles in 1937. Louis produced two motion pictures at MGM, The Big Store with the Marx Brothers and Hullabaloo. After February 1951, he was a member of the four man executive committee in charge of MGM. At his retirement in 1955, Louis K. had risen to the position of vice-president of Loew's, Incorporated. He served as vice-president and director of the Motion Picture Producers Association, as a director of the Motion Picture Relief Fund, and the Hollywood Coordinating Committee.

George Sidney had two uncles in show business, Jack Sidney, known as "Jack of Spades" a black-face comedian, and Sidney's half-uncle, George Sidney (1877-1945) (real name Samuel Greenfield), a vaudeville comic. George had a successful Broadway and screen career, most notably as the bum, Busy Izzy, a character that lasted on the vaudeville circuit from 1901-1915. His initial Broadway success was in a show entitled Welcome Stranger that ran for 309 performances. Welcome Stranger had an extensive touring schedule across the United States. In conjunction with Charlie Murray, he developed a comedy act known as Cohen and Kelly that was not only a vaudeville success but easily made the transition to motion pictures. The Cohens and Kellys films became a motion picture franchise for Universal Studios in 1924. He was married to Carrie Weber (?-1940). George was a member of the Friars Club and an avid sports fan. He owned a racehorse named Kibbitzer.

George Sidney made his on-screen debut in The Littlest Cowboy (1921) starring Tom Mix. He moved to Los Angeles in 1930. Sidney went to work as a messenger at MGM. Louis B. Mayer's nickname for Sidney was "boy". Sidney flourished at the studio and by the time he was twenty he was directing screen tests and one-reel shorts. He directed installments in the Our Gang and Little Rascals series, as well as the Pete Smith and the Crime Does Not Pay series. He won back-to-back Oscars for two of his shorts, Quicker'n a Wink (1940) and Of Pups and Puzzles (1941). His feature film directing debut was Free and Easy (1941) starring Robert Cummings. His first major film musical was the all-star, war time musical, Thousands Cheer (1943), starring Kathryn Grayson and Gene Kelly. Sidney always indicated he viewed films as entertainment and seems to have rejected the auteur theory of directing embraced by some of his well known colleagues such as John Ford and Vincent Minnelli. His film, The Three Musketeers (1948), starring Gene Kelly and Lana Turner, was one of MGM's highest grossing films in the post World War Two period. He won his third Oscar for the short, Overture to 'The Merry Wives of Windsor, in 1954. Jupiter's Darling (1955) with Esther Williams was Sidney's last film for MGM. He was loaned to Columbia Pictures to direct The Eddy Duchin Story (1956), after which his contract at MGM ended.

Sidney went on to become an independent producer and director at Columbia Pictures where he directed such films as Pal Joey (1957), starring Frank Sinatra, and Bye Bye Birdie (1963) starring Ann-Margret. He returned to MGM in the 1960s to make A Ticklish Affair (1963), starring Shirley Jones and Viva Las Vegas (1964), starring Ann-Margret and Elvis Presley. His last film was the musical Half a Sixpence (1967) starring Tommy Steele for Paramount Pictures. Sidney also directed and produced for television most notably Who Has Seen the Wind (1964). He financed and founded Hanna-Barbera Productions in 1944. He was a two-term president, 1951-1959 and 1961-1967, of the Directors Guild of America (DGA), earlier known as the Screen Directors Guild (SDG).

In his personal life, Sidney was married in 1942 to legendary MGM drama coach, Lillian "Burnsie" Burns Salzer (1903-1998). He was eight years her junior. They lived at the Sidney home (1140 Tower Road) in Beverly Hills. They divorced in the mid 1970s. For a brief time Sidney maintained a penthouse apartment for George Sidney Productions at 144 South Beverly Drive, Beverly Hills. He maintained a suite (301) in the Palm Wilshire Building, 9201 Wilshire Boulevard in the 1970s. He married his second wife, Jane Adler Robinson (?-1991), second wife and widow of actor Edward G. Robinson (1893-1974), around 1978. The house at 1140 Tower Road was sold and Sidney moved to the Robinson home at 910 Rexford Drive in Beverly Hills. Sidney married his third wife, Corinne Kegley Entratter (1937-?), widow of showman and Las Vegas entrepreneur John Entratter, in 1991. Sidney was a prolific photographer. He collected art and was apparently an avid gardener. He was a member of the Royal Horticultural Society. He died in Las Vegas, Nevada in May 2002.

Scope and Contents

The George Sidney Collection consists of approximately eighty-eight cubic feet of photographs and materials from the Hollywood director George Sidney, most dealing with his career in motion pictures. Sidney was an avid photographer and collector of photographs documenting extremely well the Hollywood film community during the Studio Era (1927-1954) of filmmaking. The bulk of the collection is from Sidney's most productive years, circa 1937-1968.

MGM's motto was "More Stars than there are in Heaven" and the researcher would be advised that the extent of this collection is such that it is impossible to list and identify all of the celebrities and personalities photographed, both behind and in front of the camera. There are stills from Sidney's many productions as well as his on-set personal photographs. There are photographs from dinner parties, and many studio and film community functions. Productions are dated to their generally accepted first theatrical release date (Los Angeles and New York) and in the case of a Broadway show to their opening date.

Container Listing

Series 1: Photographs, Photographic Negatives, and Slides, 1914-1996, undated

This series consists of photographs collected as well as taken by George Sidney. He assigned each roll of film he shot a number and he repeated roll numbers over the course of his life. In most cases, a contact sheet was made from a roll of film, the number was noted on the reverse, filed with any relevant material in an envelope with the roll number and then stored in a file cabinet. Some envelopes contained contact sheets, photographic prints, and negatives. Other envelopes contained nothing or only negatives or prints. See the "Empty photograph envelope" (Series 3, Subseries 2) file for those envelopes that were empty or had only negatives enclosed in them. Many rolls of film were shot in different venues, and the researcher is encouraged to look beyond the initial folder title and arrangement for subjects not noted in the finding aid. Slides, unless otherwise noted, are maintained in original order, even though scene numbers may not be sequential. Original arrangement may reflect the way Sidney shot the film. Entries with no folder numbers denote binder boxes or oversize boxes.

Subseries 1.2: Productions, 1921-1968

This subseries includes photographs taken in support of, or documenting, a variety of motion picture, stage, television, or radio productions. Many of the photographs in this series were taken by Sidney himself. There are numerous stills taken by the various studio photographic departments. Some of the photographs are not Sidney photographs but MGM publicity stills. There are unidentified production stills that have a date and production number on the edge of the photograph but remain unidentified as to title. The photographs are arranged by production title and then sequentially according to Sidney's film roll numbers.

Subseries 1.3: Personalities and People, 1932-1996, undated

This subseries consists of photographs of well-known film and entertainment personalities, artists such as William Crutchfield, Patrick Farrow, Leon Ulbricht and others apparently taken for the Giraffe Gallery in Los Angeles, and Sidney acquaintances within the professional and social sphere. This series contains photographs of weddings, dinner parties Sidney attended, events held away from the Sidney residence, and unidentified joggers. The photographs are arranged alphabetically by last name or subject and then sequentially according to Sidney's film roll numbers. There are photographs of Marcella Napp, an assistant casting director at MGM during the 1930s and 1940s and one of the few woman at the time to hold such a high-ranking studio position.

Subseries 1.4: Personal and Family, 1914-1992, undated

This subseries includes photographs of family, friends, holiday celebrations, and acquaintances entertained at the Sidney home. This series includes personal birthday and holiday photographs. There are numerous photographs of George Sidney's maternal aunt, Agnes Mooney Dobson, known as "Fuddie", and her son Ned Dobson, including his wife Jean and their children. This series includes the many photographs Sidney took documenting his art collection. It includes formal family and individual portraits by Strauss-Payton of Kansas City, Missouri, MGM studio photographer, Clarence Sinclair Bull, Gaby of Montreal, Canada and others. Many photographs in this series were taken at the Sidney home, 1140 Tower Road in Beverly Hills and later at 910 Rexford Drive. There are photographs of Iranian protests in Los Angeles from 1978, the 1979 Rose Parade, Elaine Goldsmith's sculpture, and the Sidney family dogs. There are photographs of art objects, silver, painting, and damage to the house at 1140 Tower Road taken at the time of the Sidney's divorce. There are photographs documenting paintings associated with Edward G. Robinson and his wife Jane Robinson. A number of contact sheets have photographic tests on them as well as personal photographs. The photographs are arranged sequentially according to Sidney's film roll numbers.

Subseries 1.5: Family Photograph Albums and Scrapbooks, 1918-1950, undated

This subseries contains photograph albums and scrapbooks created by the Sidney family. Six of the family photograph albums were created out of the commercially available black paper albums; there are few clippings in these albums. The "House of Sidney" volumes are two scrapbooks apparently created on the occasion of George Sidney's employment by MGM and his subsequent move to California from New York. There are two scrapbooks detailing a Sidney family trip to Hawaii in 1950; Sidney's parents and Jeanette McDonald figure prominently. Louis K. Sidney's scrapbook contains clippings of his theatre management career in such cities as St. Louis, Missouri; Detroit, Michigan; and Denver, Colorado. Highlighted are marketing tactics, lobby displays, and press releases for a variety of motion pictures of the early twentieth century. There is correspondence from the William Fox Company and clippings publicizing his marriage.

Subseries 1.6: Travel and Locations, 1940-1981, undated

This subseries includes photographs identified with travel and location scouting for Sidney's personal travel as well as motion picture productions he was involved in. This series includes all family travel. It includes unidentified photographs of landscapes and locations that cannot be connected to either a specific production or family trip. The photographs are arranged sequentially according to Sidney's film roll numbers.

Subseries 1.7: Studio, Entertainment, and Public Events, 1949-1995, undated

This subseries includes photographs taken at entertainment events, Sidney's "official" birthday celebrations, motion picture premiers, tributes, and various entertainment-related functions. This series includes photographs associated with Sidney's involvement in the Directors Guild of America. Prior to his death Sidney gave many of the negatives and prints related to the DGA to the DGA for their own archives. This series includes all identifiable studio social functions. The photographs are arranged by title and then sequentially according to Sidney's film roll numbers.

Series 2: Production Ephemera, Posters, and Scripts, 1930-1991

This series contains posters for Sidney productions, both domestic and foreign, and posters connected to Sidney productions through association (Bernadette Peters' Annie Get Your Gun) or advertising (Thousands Cheer DVD release.) This series contains material related to Sidney productions and scripts associated or developed by Sidney personally or for hire. There is additional material associated with productions that do not have an apparent Sidney connection. Sidney's personal collection of bound film scripts are housed in the Division of Music, Sports, and Entertainment, National Museum of American History, Smithsonian but are listed here. The two subseries are arranged alphabetically by production title. This series is divided into two subseries.

Series 3: Office Files and Personal Material, 1903-2002, undated

This series contains a brief autobiography of Louis K. Sidney written in 1944. This series contains the many attempts by Sidney at writing an autobiography. There are oral history transcripts. The inventories housed in this Subseries 2 were most likely done to document the gift of Sidney materials to the Doheny Library at the University of Southern California. This series contains autobiographical material on Sidney, a transcript of his oral history for the Directors Guild of America and other materials. Of particular interest are the comments Sidney recorded on his photographs located in Subseries 2. This series is divided into two subseries.

Series 4: Music Manuscripts, Sheet Music, and Music Related Material, 1885-1992, undated

This series is wide ranging and includes not only music manuscripts and sheet music from motion pictures associated with and/or directed by Sidney but from other motion pictures and Broadway shows as well. The sheet music covers an inclusive range of MGM titles, both musical and non-musical films, for the years of Sidney's tenure at that studio. The sheet music appears to have been collected by various members of the Sidney family. The copy of "Love is a Many Splendored Thing" is inscribed to his wife Lillian Burns Sidney. A copy of "Serenade" is inscribed to Louis K. Sidney from E.V. Cupere. Sheet music is arranged alphabetically by title of motion picture, Broadway, or television show. Productions are dated to their generally accepted first theatrical release date or, in the case of a Broadway show, their opening date. If there are two dates, one is the Broadway opening date and the subsequent motion-picture release date or vice-versa. This series includes advance artist copies of songs as well as standard sheet music releases. Some of the sheet music from Broadway shows may have been purchased by Sidney with an eye to their worth as potential musical film projects. Some of the sheet music may have been used by Sidney's vaudevillian uncle, George Sidney. This series is divided into three subseries.

Subseries 4.1, Music Manuscripts, 1937-1960, undated

Subseries 4.2, Sheet Music, 1885-1990

Subseries 4.3, Music Related Material, 1971-1992, undated

Series 5: Audiovisual, 1933-2001, undated

This series contains motion picture film, both personal and professional, associated with Sidney or his family. The film is color, black and white, 16mm and 35mm. It contains copies of acetates (tapes), presumably soundtracks, from some of Sidney's films and miscellaneous productions. The video in this series is a mixture of video of Sidney films or programs associated with Sidney or his films. Absent evidence to the contrary films are dated to the edge code. Some films are in a state of deterioration. While many films were boxed, some information on the boxes bears no correlation to the subject matter of the film, leading one to believe that Sidney was not rigid in keeping the box and the film it had contained always together. This series also includes compilation reels of short Sidney film that were assembled by the Archives Center. This series is divided into three subseries.

Subseries 5.1, Film, 1940-1960, undated

Subseries 5.2, Audio, 1933-2001, undated

Subseries 5.3, Video, 1989-2001, undated
