Biographical / Historical

William Sanford "Bill" Nye, (November 27, 1955-), was born in Bethesda, Maryland to Edwin D. Nye and Jacqueline B. Jenkins. Nye graduated from Cornell University (1977) with a degree in mechanical engineering and moved to Seattle to work for Boeing as a mechanical engineer (1977-1985). Nye also worked stand-up comedy and in 1985 joined Seattle's local comedy show Almost Live! During a 1987 episode of Almost Live! Nye wore a science lab coat and conducted an experiment launching the "Bill Nye the Science Guy" persona. From 1993-1998 Nye hosted Bill Nye the Science Guy. The show aired on PBS and was later syndicated to local television stations.

Scope and Contents

The collection documents Bill Nye's early life, his Science Guy persona and its development for his television program Bill Nye the Science Guy. Included in the collection are patents, awards, speeches, subject files, correspondence, email, fan mail, photographs, scripts and promotional materials for television shows, and video recordings.

Series 6: Fan Mail, 1995 - 2001

Scope and Contents: This series contains handwritten, typescript, and email fan mail addressed to Bill Nye. The majority of the fan mail is from children, especially science classes across the United States and Canada thanking and praising Nye for his efforts to promote science. Other materials include drawings, posters, sketches, photographs, and one bow tie. The materials are arranged chronologically.
