Biographical / Historical

John Upton Terrell was born in 1900 in Chicago, Illinois. During his teenage years he moved west, working first as a ranch hand in Montana, before later becoming a journalist and author in California. Terrell eventually published over three dozen books, many on the history of the Old West and various Native American communities. He died in 1988 at age 87.

Scope and Contents

The John Upton Terrell manuscripts consist of 2 unpublished book manuscripts, Shawnee Chronicle and Frontier Soldier, written by author and historian John Upton Terrell in approximately 1975. His manuscript Shawnee Chronicle provides a history of the Shawnee peoples, their migrations, and their interactions with other Native and non-Native groups up until the early 19th century. Terrell's other manuscript in this collection, Frontier Soldier, chronicles the life of U.S. Army Major General George Crook, known for his involvement in the "Indian Wars" in the decades directly following the Civil War.

Arrangement

The materials in this collection maintain their original order.
