Biographical / Historical

Letter carriers' bands associated with union branches date back to the nineteenth century. The National Association of Letter Carriers (NALC) members and band participants believed letter carriers' bands could "[kindle] the union spirit at NALC conventions and rallies" through music. Updates from various cities published in The Postal Record show friendly competition grew with the creation of local bands.

The National Association of Letter Carriers, Branch 40, was first established in Cleveland, Ohio, on October 6, 1889 as the Cleveland Letter Carriers' Mutual Benefits Association. While a national association did not exist at this time, representatives of the Cleveland association met with representatives of other independent associations in 1890 to form the National Association of Letter Carriers. Cleveland received its official charter from the national organization on August 28, 1890 and the Cleveland Letter Carriers' Band was established the same year. Organized by William Llewellyn, the early band consisted of a brass band with 26 pieces. Its first Drum Major was William Kirby and another early band member was Francis J. Horner.

After the NALC convention in 1890 until the fall of 1899 the band struggled along, supported by dues and honorary memberships until it became untenable to continue. At the time the members of the band enlisted as a whole in the 5th Regiment Ohio National Guard under Colonel C. X. Zimmerman, an ex-letter carrier. They were honorably discharged on February 20, 1902; re-enlisted on July 1, 1902, and again honorably discharged February 20, 1904. For the next three years, due to a variety of difficulties and obstacles, the activities of the band were at an all time low, but in the summer of 1907 a push was made to reassert the group and the Cleveland Letter Carriers' Band was reorganized to function as the band seen today. In September of 1907, the first rehearsal was called with the following members present: William Llewellyn, President; Thomas Edwards, Secretary-Treasurer; William J. Lucas, Director; F. Amsberg; B. H. Butler; Joe David; W. F. Jacobs; Tom Edwards; W. Giesel; J. C. Mangan; Samuel Mott; H. Rimmel; J. C. Thompson; F. H. Eger; Frank Horner; F. H. Nelson; F. Pekar; W. Wallace; _____ Burke; _____ Betz; and Art Driggs.

Letter carriers' bands had become such a large part of the NALC that by the 1911 St. Paul Convention a National Association of Letter Carriers' Bands was created. The founding members were the Boston, New York, Brooklyn, Cleveland, and Chicago Letter Carriers' Bands. The Association was organized with three objectives in mind: To promote measures for the musical education of its members; the improvement of the musical features of the conventions of the NALC; and to unite, fraternally and socially, all the letter carriers' bands of the United States for their mutual benefit and enjoyment.

Throughout the twentieth century, bands performed at the biennial NALC conventions as part of multi-day programs. According to the donor of this collection, Jeanne A. Tischler, the union covered all travel and accommodation expenses, making band membership an opportunity for members to tour and connect with postal workers across the country in a way they might not have done on their own. Additionally drum majorettes became a part of the band as it expanded to encompass more members.

The Cleveland Letter Carriers' Band's most significant performance is at NALC conventions, but over time its interests expanded to performing at local and regional events, performing at charitable institutions, and taking part in civic and patriotic affairs in Cleveland and around the country. During non-NALC convention years, the band performs at the Ohio State Association. To this day the band continues to perform locally in the Cleveland area.
