The Smithsonian American Art Museum and Renwick Gallery website features general information for visitors and educational resources as well as collections, research, conservation, program, and donation information.

The Eye Level blog is dedicated to American art and the ways in which the nation's art reflects its history and culture. The blog was opened in September 2005.

The informational website for the exhibition, The Art of Video Games, asked the public to vote for video games to be included in the exhibition which ran from March 16 through September 30, 2012. The website chronicles the process of choosing the video games as well as provides information about the exhibition.
