This accession consists of the main Smithsonian Science Education Center (SSEC) website as it existed on July 3, 2014. SSEC is jointly administered by the Smithsonian Institution and the National Academies. The website replaced the former National Science Resources Center website when the office changed its name in 2013. The SSEC website includes information about the organization's history, mission, programs, resources, staff, and Advisory Board as well as science education in general. It also includes online games, links to teaching resources, and a blog, "STEMVisions," with posts dating to October 2012. Materials are in electronic format.
