Descriptive Entry

This accession consists of a website and a blog, both titled "Recovering Voices," as they existed on August 5, 2014. Recovering Voices is a collaborative initiative of the National Museum of Natural History, the National Museum of the American Indian, and the Center for Folklife and Cultural Heritage to work with communities worldwide to sustain and celebrate linguistic and cultural diversity. The website provides information about the project and its research, events, and grant program. The blog consists of one post from April 2014 which serves as an introduction to the program. Materials are in electronic format.
