Smithsonian Institution Archives, Accession 15-016, National Air and Space Museum, Website Records

Descriptive Entry

This accession consists of the "Science in Pre-K" website, maintained by the National Air and Space Museum (NASM), as it existed on September 2, 2014. The Science in Pre-K program began as a cooperative effort between NASM and the District of Columbia Public Schools to provide professional development and grew to have a national audience. The website provides teachers with a foundation in physical science content and teaching methods for science inquiry in a preschool environment. The website also includes a blog which was launched in May 2014. Materials are in electronic format.
