Descriptive Entry

This accession consists of the Field Book Project website as it existed on August 7, 2014. The Field Book Project began as a joint initiative between the National Museum of Natural History and the Smithsonian Institution Archives to create a single online location for scholars and others to visit when searching for field books and other field research materials. With additional partnerships with the Smithsonian Institution Libraries and the Office of the Chief Information Officer, the project has expanded to be pan-institutional and has also partnered with many external organizations. The website includes information about the project as well as educational activities and lesson plans. Materials are in electronic format.
