Descriptive Entry

This accession consists of the "Smithsonian Wild" website as it existed on June 1, 2016. The website is jointly administered by the National Museum of Natural History and the National Zoological Park and allows the public to browse and search camera trap photographs taken in nine locations around the world. Also included is general information about the project and each project site. The website does not appear to have received many updates since it launched in 2010 and some of the content is missing.
