Descriptive Entry

This accession consists of the YouTube account of the Encyclopedia of Life as it existed on July 17, 2018. The Encyclopedia of Life is a global partnership between the scientific community and the general public to make freely available to anyone knowledge about all the world's organisms. YouTube is a video-sharing service that is often used for disseminating informational, educational, and promotional videos. The account was crawled twice, once focusing on the account in general and once focusing on the videos. Due to technical issues, some content may be missing and some features may not function as expected. Materials are in electronic format.
