Descriptive Entry

This accession consists of the Twitter account of the Panama Amphibian Rescue and Conservation Project as it existed on July 10, 2019. The Project's mission is to rescue and establish assurance colonies of amphibian species that are in extreme danger of extinction throughout Panama. The National Zoological Park and the Smithsonian Tropical Research Institute are both project partners and play a role in the administration of the Project. Twitter is a microblog that the Project uses to publicize its activities and related research. Materials are in electronic format.
