Descriptive Entry

This accession consists of the Facebook account of the Panama Amphibian Rescue and Conservation Project as it existed on January 28, 2019. The Project's mission is to rescue and establish assurance colonies of amphibian species that are in extreme danger of extinction throughout Panama. The National Zoological Park and the Smithsonian Tropical Research Institute are both project partners and play a role in the administration of the Project. Facebook is a third-party social networking site used for interaction with the general public. Due to technical issues, the capture of this account may be incomplete and some features may not function as expected. Some content is significantly older than the date it was captured. Materials are in electronic format.
