Smithsonian Institution Archives, Accession 21-056, National Museum of Natural History, Website Records

Descriptive Entry

This accession consists of two pages of the National Museum of Natural History website and a blog.

The National Anthropological Archives Digitized Collections page, crawled on November 20, 2019, provides information about a grant project to digitize endangered-language materials and includes a list of digitized collections. The National Anthropological Archives is part of the Department of Anthropology.

The Repatriation Review Committee page was crawled on May 6, 2020. It provides information about the Committee and its by-laws. The Committee is located within the Department of Anthropology.

The blog, "Magnetic North: Arctic Studies at the Smithsonian," crawled on March 13, 2020, is maintained by the Arctic Studies Center within the Department of Anthropology. Its purpose is to inform the public about research in the Arctic and Subarctic, with a focus on issues affecting circumpolar communities, both past and present, and the ecosystems they inhabit, and includes archaeological, anthropological, ecological, and climatological research. The blog launched in March 2011.

Materials are in electronic format.
